Ex-Secretary Of State John Foster Dulles Dies At 7:49 O'clock Sunday Morning In Walter Reed Hospital, Washington; Funeral On Wednesday

Many World Leaders Will Attend Rites

By JOE F. KANE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Top Western diplomats who worked with John Foster Dulles in his unrelenting efforts to check Soviet expansion will fly here to pay final tribute to the former secretary of state.

Dulles, 71, a towering mid-century bulwark against communism as President Eisenhower's foreign policy pilot for six years, died of cancer Sunday at 7:49 a.m. Most of his family was at his bedside.

President Eisenhower deeply mourned his passing, and the free world mourned with him. Flags on U.S. government buildings throughout the world were ordered at half staff for three days, and Eisenhower cancelled his formal schedule during that period.

Military Honors

An official funeral, rather than state rites, will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the big Washington National (Episcopal) Cathedral. An honor guard of uniformed servicemen will keep a vigil beside the body at the cathedral during the 24 hours before the funeral.

Full military honors accorded heroes and distinguished leaders will be given Dulles when he is buried in Arlington National Cemetery across the Potomac River from Washington.

The Big Four foreign ministers conference in Geneva will recess Wednesday and Thursday as Secretary of State Christian A. Herter flies home for the funeral. With him will be the British and French foreign ministers, Selwyn Lloyd and Maurice Couve de Murville.

Gromyko May Come

There was a possibility Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko might also attend. He expressed "deep condolences" to Herter when told of Dulles' death.

Death came to Dulles in his sleep at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Mrs. Dulles hurried back to the hospital at 5:30 a.m. after a doctor's visit. (Continued On Page 10)

John Foster Dulles

"Believed In Dignity Of Man"

Two hours after Ex-Secretary of State John Foster Dulles died in Walter Reed Hospital, President Eisenhower issued the following statement from his farm near here at 10 o'clock Sunday morning:

"John Foster Dulles is dead. A lifetime of labor for world peace has ended. His countrymen and all who believe in justice and the rule of law grieve at the passing from the earthly scene of one of the truly great men of our time.

"Throughout his life and particularly during his eventful six years as secretary of state, his courage, his wisdom and his friendly understanding were devoted to bettering relations among nations. He was a foe only to tyranny.

"Because he believed in the dignity of men and in their brotherhood under God, he was an ardent supporter of their deepest hopes and aspirations. From his life and work, humanity will in the years to come gain renewed inspiration to work even harder for the attainment of the goal of peace with justice. In the pursuit of that goal he ignored every personal cost and sacrifice, however great.

"We, who were privileged to work with him, have lost a dear and close friend as all Americans have lost a champion of freedom. United, we extend to Mrs. Dulles, to her children and to all members of the Dulles family our prayers and deepest sympathies and the assurance that in our memories will live affection, respect and admiration for John Foster Dulles."

Dulles Was Eisenhower's General In Cold War For Six Years; Tireless Aide

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Foster Dulles was for six years President Eisenhower's No. 1 cold war general in the fight against international communism.

He had to quit his active part in that fight on April 15, 1959 when at the age of 71 the ravages of cancer forced him to resign as secretary of state.

Thus ended a career that had made Dulles an outstanding world figure, a tireless diplomat whose tactics sometimes stirred praise, sometimes criticism.

Disliked By Reds

One consistent fact: The Russians didn't like him.

The resignation was tendered to become effective at Eisenhower's convenience. By his own wish Dulles held on to office long enough to countersign the commission of a friend and fellow worker Christian A. Herter, to succeed him.

Dulles performed that friendly service April 21 at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where he had been much of the time since it was discovered in February that cancer had recurred in his abdominal region.

Temporary Relief

Surgery proved temporarily successful in 1956, but the doctors decided this time they would have to rely on massive radiation. For a time, their patient responded, but on April 14 they reported evidence of a cancerous growth in the lower neck.

The announcement of Dulles' resignation, long expected though it had been, loosed an extraordinary flood of statements.

These comments were the sort that usually heap praise when a prominent man lies dead—but here was a case in which the man could read and hear what people thought of him.

"Affection, Admiration" Eisenhower wrote to "Dear Foster":

"I accept, with deepest personal regret and only because I have no alternative, your resignation.

"In so doing, I can but repeat what the vast outpouring of affection and admiration from the free world has told you."

Eisenhower went on to remark on Dulles' talents, integrity, his heritage and experience, and called him a man who inspired countless people to join the free world fight for freedom and principle.

Enthusiastically but less formally, Eisenhower several times called Dulles the greatest secretary of state America ever had. Former President Herbert Hoover said much the same thing.

Tribute Was Stevenson

A Democratic tribute came from Adlai E. Stevenson, who tried twice to beat Eisenhower.

Stevenson said of Dulles: "I know of no man who has served his country more diligently and devotedly."

Eisenhower found still another way to demonstrate his feeling: The announcement of Dulles' resignation, long expected though it had been, loosed an extraordinary flood of statements.

President is Saddened By Dulles Death

A saddened President Eisenhower received the news of the death of the man who had been his secretary of state for six years, John Foster Dulles, less than ten minutes after the cancer-stricken man breathed his last in Walter Reed hospital Sunday morning at 7:49 o'clock. It was telephoned to him at his farm home near here by his personal physician, Major General Howard M. Snyder.

Mr. Eisenhower had come here to spend a weekend of work and of rest. Dr. Snyder had remained in Washington.

Sinks Rapidly

Shortly before 6:30 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Dulles started to sink rapidly. Dr. Snyder and James C. Hagerty, the President's press secretary, were advised. The Dulles family was also informed and rushed to his bedside.

When Mr. Dulles died, Dr. Snyder telephoned the President who immediately went to his glass-enclosed porch at his farm and started to spell out in pencil on a yellow scratch pad his statement of tribute to Dulles. A few minutes later Mr. Hagerty phoned the President who asked him to come to Gettysburg.

At the farm the President wrote, edited, and wrote again. Then Mr. Hagerty typed the statement, there being no secretaries at the farm at the time. Mr. Eisenhower again edited the copy, made some changes and at (Continued On Page 10)

HAMM FILES NEW ACCOUNT

A new account was filed today by Walter J. Hamm Jr., New Oxford R. D., in the equity action brought against him by his uncle, Hugh K. Hamm, Hanover R. D.

Hamm had filed an earlier account, in accordance with an order of court handed down after the younger Hamm was declared to be a partner with his uncle in the operation of a farm from 1946 through 1953. The younger Hamm had alleged that he was a tenant on the farm under an agreement to buy.

The first accounting was rejected by the court and he was directed to present a more detailed account.

The former account listed a deficit in the operation of the farm. The new account listed a farm. The new account gives many details, and lists losses in year-by-year operation. According to the account the farm lost money in its operation each year except 1950 when it showed a profit of $27.39. The losses listed total more than $46,000. The account also states that young Hamm took machinery, valued at $9,000, off the farm, some of which he said was partially paid from operations of the farm.

WAC KISSED BY COLONEL, BUT IT'S OK

EDGEWOOD, Md. (AP)—It was just a simple swearing-in ceremony in the colonel's office.

But when it was over, the colonel gave WAC Lt. Dorothy Fellenz a fatherly kiss on the cheek.

And why not, since Col. Lloyd E. Fellenz, commander of the chemical warfare laboratories at the Army Chemical Center, is her father.

The Fellenzes are only two of many members of their family in government service.

Another uncle, Lt. Col. E. F. Higgins, is an adviser to the National Guard at Hartford, Conn. Lt. Alex Burke, a cousin, is with the Air Force's Strategic Air Command in Nebraska.

Cadet Cousin

Thomas B. Trockmorton, another cousin, is a cadet at West Point.

A third cousin, Pfc. Joseph Gatti, is stationed at Fort Totten, N. Y.

The lieutenant's grandfather, Robert A. Fellenz, retired from the Army with 38 years' service. Uncle H. R. Fellenz is a retired Army captain living at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

And the end is not in sight.

Dorothy's 19-year-old sister, Genie, is a student at the College of New Rochelle, N. Y., and works at the chemical center during the summer.

A younger sister, Andrea, is a teenager. And there are three younger brothers, ranging in age down to Johnny, a first-grader.

DR. WALKER IS KUTZTOWN STC SPEAKER TODAY

KUTZTOWN Pa. (AP)—Dr. Eric A. Walker, president of Pennsylvania State University, today called for an overhaul of "grossly inadequate" methods of financing higher education.

In a commencement address prepared for delivery at Kutztown State Teachers College, Walker said:

"Private colleges and universities must literally beg for funds with which to carry out the essential public services they perform, a situation that has caused the resignation of many of our more able college presidents.

"The public institutions, on the other hand," Walker said, "must look to the legislatures that have to the conventional political wisdom that taxes are bad in and of themselves and must be kept low at all costs, including the cost of curtailing essential social services.

"Low in this case is always measured in relation to the existing tax structure and almost never in relation to the necessity for the services the taxes will buy or even the ability and willingness of the people to pay them," he said.

"If, as a people and as a nation, we continue to permit this imbalance between the need for higher education in our country and the inadequate mechanisms we have for financing it, we shall be guilty of gambling with the future, our own as well as that of America."

FBI LEAVES PARKER CASE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal authorities today announced their withdrawal from the kidnap-killer case of Mack Charles Parker. The results of their lengthy investigation will be turned over to the state of Mississippi.

Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers said the evidence obtained by the FBI after a masked mob snatched Parker from the Pearl River County jail at Poplarville, Miss., April 25 and killed him, failed to show any violation of federal statutes.

In view of this, Rogers today directed the FBI to deliver to Mississippi's Gov. J. P. Coleman at Jackson "a summary of information relative to facts and evidence obtained during the FBI's investigation."

It was left up to Coleman to determine whether any prosecution under state law is possible.

Parker, a 23-year-old Negro was on the eve of being tried on a charge of raping a pregnant white woman when he was abducted. His body was found May 4 in the Pearl River swamps near Bogalusa, La., by FBI agents and Mississippi highway patrolmen. He had been shot twice.

President Eisenhower said: "I personally believe Mr. Dulles has filled his office with greater distinction and greater ability than any other man."

Another Highlight In Dulles' Career

getting away with it, plus his growing military strength in Soviet armaments, would lead to a crushing assault on Israel when he felt strong enough.

Israeli troops invaded Egypt and British and French forces followed them in.

England and France were dependent on the canal for oil from the Middle East. They called a movement of their troops a "police action." Their announced purpose was to keep the canal open and to prevent further hostilities between the Israelis and Egyptians.

But communism did advance. In Indochina, French and Vietnamese officers, enemies of almost eight years of warfare there, signed an armistice in Geneva that was generally regarded as a defeat for the free world. Under its terms, much of Indochina came under Communist rule.

In South America
The first Communist-tinged government in the Western Hemisphere — in Guatemala — was ousted after a 12-day revolution. Dulles hailed this development as a "new and glorious" victory over Red encroachments.

Several years later, however, a stepped-up Communist drive was blamed in part for an outbreak of violence against Vice President Richard M. Nixon when he was on what was designed as a good will tour of eight South American countries.

The 1958 riots and demonstrations showing resentment against Nixon as a symbol of the U. S. Government spelled out perhaps the blackest chapter in inter-American relations since before the Good Neighbor policy was devised in the late 1920s and early 1930s.

Dulles gained a reputation for stating the harsh facts of his diplomacy in blunt undiplomatic words which sometimes stirred up sharp controversy.

Would Meet Force With Force
He operated in a state of almost constant crisis. It was his conviction that the West could survive only if it met Soviet force with force and never lost its nerve.

An article in Life magazine early in 1956 quoted him as saying the Eisenhower Administration walked three times to "the brink of war" — over Korea (during the 1953 armistice negotiations), Indochina and Formosa — and averted it each time by letting the Communists know the United States was prepared to take "strong action."

The article represented him as saying the ability to get to the verge and yet sidestep war was a "necessary art" of diplomacy. "If you cannot master it," Dulles was quoted, "you inevitably get into war. If you run away from it, if you're scared to go to the brink, you are lost. . . . We walked to the brink and we looked it in the face."

Democrats accused him of overstating the administration's success in world affairs — of "hucksterism" in an election year. In some Allied countries the secretary was denounced in such terms as "edgy gambler."

Crisis In Mid East
The Soviet Union's bold bid to become a dominant force in the oil-rich Middle East presented a formidable and disturbing problem for the West.

That country succeeded in just a few months in penetrating this vital section of the world to which it had been denied access during many years of effort. It sent advisers and technicians into Egypt and tied that nation's economy to its own.

In 1956 Egypt's strong man, President Gamal Abdel Nasser, seized the Suez Canal Company under a nationalization program. That alarmed Israeli leaders who feared that Nasser's success in

"Don't Worry, And Keep Busy"

Crisis came and went, but Secretary Dulles worked from one to another without apparent concern. His motto was: "Don't worry and keep busy."

"I like the work," he explained to an interviewer after he had been at it for more than six years and was past his 70th birthday. "I find it challenging, always stimulating. But the big thing that keeps me going is the confidence of the President."

He and President Eisenhower, he said, "invariably agree on the general approach to foreign policy problems and he leaves the technical details to me."

Prior to masterminding negotiation of the Japanese peace treaty, Dulles had participated in the formation of the United Nations. President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed him an adviser to the American delegation to the San Francisco security conference in 1945 that adopted the U.N. charter.

He served as a delegate to a number of U. N. General Assemblies and also participated in meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Dulles came into considerable prominence in 1944 when New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey selected him as his foreign affairs adviser in his campaign for the Presidency. Dulles served in the same capacity four years later when Dewey ran again. Had Dewey been elected either time, Dulles was slated to be his secretary of state.

Both Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, who had headed opposing factions of the Republican party, urged Eisenhower to appoint Dulles secretary of state.

A Man Of Motion
From the time he took office at the beginning of 1953, Dulles was a man of motion. He had hardly gotten settled when he was off on a goodwill tour of seven European countries, and he kept up a pace that would have wearied many a younger man.

His foreign travels took him to at least 20 countries never previously visited by an American secretary of state, as well as to many others.

Dulles became the nation's first jet-propelled secretary when he made a polar flight from Europe to Formosa in an Air Force KC135 tanker in 1958.

In less than six years his total travel mileage passed the half-million mark, mostly by air. He liked to fly because he could relax aboard a plane, or go ahead with his paper work away from ringing telephones and visitors.

His biographer wrote that Dulles had an "attitude of Presbyterian predestination toward the hazards of flying."

An Inveterate Worker
A man of rugged build and great physical stamina, Dulles' endurance was such that he never seemed to slow down. An associate once said he was made of "leather, steel and whipcord."

Even when he was past 70, Dulles maintained a seven-day-a-week schedule. It was his custom to arrive at his office at 8:30 and stay until after 7. His only break was half an hour for lunch—usually just an apple and cup of tea. On Saturdays and Sundays he worked at home, keeping one of his secretaries busy with her notebook and electric typewriter.

In the fall of 1956, when he was 68, the secretary had his first serious illness. He was hit without warning by sharp abdominal pains at his home in the midst of his work on crises in Eastern Europe.

Emergency surgery at the Walter Reed Army hospital revealed an intestinal cancer. The diseased section was removed.

During the illness Dulles hardly lost stride. In a few days after the operation he was firing off cables and telephoning orders from his bedside.

Cancer Recurred
In December of 1958 Dulles was treated at the same hospital for an inflammatory condition of the lower colon.

At that time no cancer was detected, and when Dulles left the hospital in December of 1958 it was with the statement that "I feel fine." A few days later he was off by plane to Paris for an Atlantic Pact ministerial meeting.

But when he underwent a hernia operation in February of 1959

Dulles Never Worried About Student Riots

When students in foreign countries protested something or other by rioting, Secretary Dulles thought their goings-on should not be taken too seriously. He remembered that as a student at the Sorbonne in Paris, "I used to go out and riot occasionally."

"On whose side?" newsmen asked.

"I can't remember now which side I was on," he replied. "That shows how students just like to riot for the fun of it."

The discussion grew out of student demonstrations in Indonesia to denounce alleged American intervention in an Indonesian civil war.

With his personal knowledge of student riots, Dulles was unruffled by a student demonstration against him on his arrival in Brazil for an official visit in 1958.

a recurrence of cancer was discovered upon examination of tissue and fluid that had been removed. The doctors ruled out further surgery and used radiation therapy.

President Eisenhower announced the new turn in the secretary's condition, and the news evoked expressions of regret and concern around the world. He was virtually the one-man director of the United States — indeed of the free world's — international policy.

His critics argued that the job of diplomacy was to prevent crises from arising, not to go to "the brink of war," as Dulles said was done after they had developed. Dulles also was criticized on the ground that he had not developed imaginative new policies.

But even his sharpest critics conceded that this country seldom had had a more hard-headed, resourceful representative at the negotiating table.

Thorn In Soviets' Side
Possibly no man was more denounced by the Soviets than Dulles — a record which he sometimes regarded as a tribute to his success in frustrating Soviet aims of conquest.

"I express the thoughts and prayers of all of us that the results of his operation and the further course of treatment will be successful," the President said in telling of the cancer recurrence.

"In order to allow time for this purpose, the secretary continues on leave of absence."

At the Capitol, congressional leaders praised Dulles for his conduct of his secretaryship, and in the Senate the members stood in silent prayer for his recovery.

Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas had introduced a resolution that "the Senate stand in silent prayer to the Almighty for the early and complete recovery of the secretary of state, the beloved John Foster Dulles."

Johnson said he and Dulles "have both agreed and disagreed — yet it has never been difficult to work with him for the best interest of the nation."

Courage Admired
Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee also admitting to differences with Dulles over the years, said he was "moved to admiration by the spectacle of courage" Dulles had shown as well as his "unrelenting purpose of seeking peace."

President Eisenhower said at a news conference that "as long as Secretary Dulles believes that he is in shape to carry on, he is exactly the person I want" for secretary of state. He called Dulles "my closest associate . . . my principal assistant . . . my closest friend and confidant" in foreign affairs, and added:

Ready To Bow Out
"I know of no man in the world who has equaled his wisdom and his knowledge in this whole complicated business."

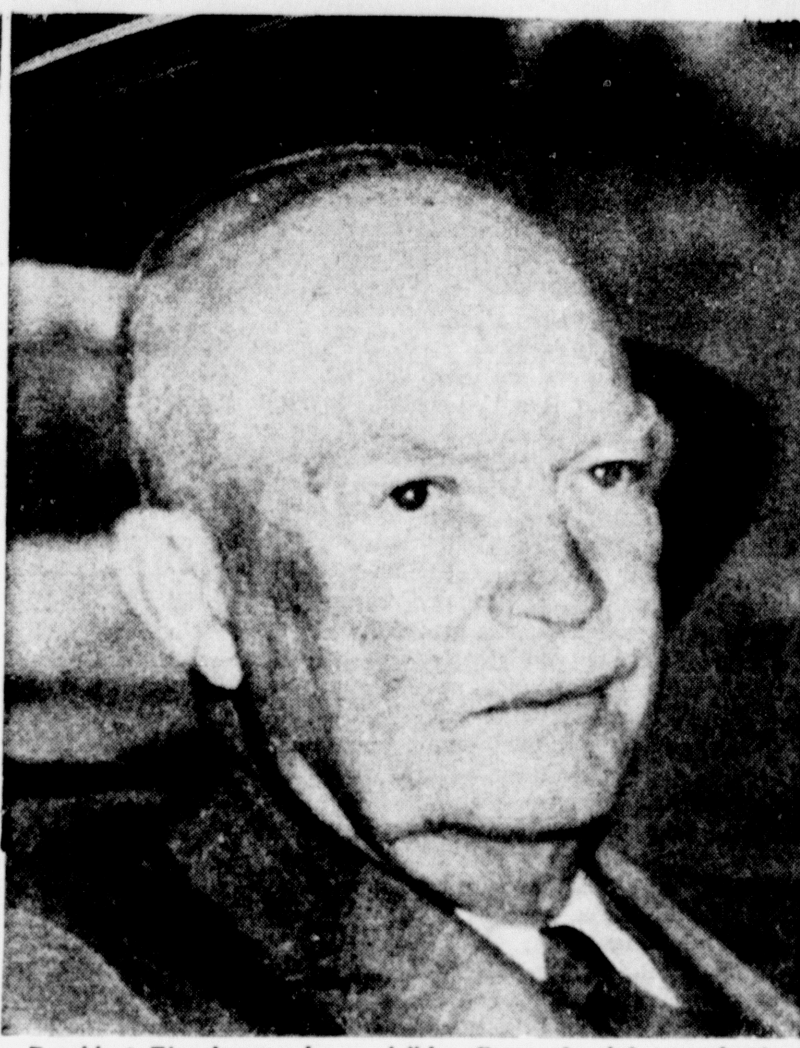

Dulles' resignation brought expressions of deep sorrow from the western world's leaders.

When he returned from the south, newsmen noted he had deteriorated badly. They estimated he had lost 15 to 20 pounds of his normal 185. His face looked wasted; his clothes hung loosely.

But as he alighted from the plain, Dulles said "I feel pretty good." Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who met at the airport, remarked:

"You know Foster, he never complains."

World War I Activities
Dulles was only 29 when President Woodrow Wilson sent him on an important diplomatic mission. That was in 1917 after the

He said that Dulles had made it clear from the day he took office that he would bow out whenever Eisenhower regarded him as "a political or a national liability."

Dulles had always taken his health for granted. His rugged constitution was a legend and he considered any illness as a nuisance. When he went to the hospital for the hernia operation, he announced that he would be available for consultation and would continue to work on international problems.

President Grieves
But his courage and determination could not prevail against cancer. On April 15, President Eisenhower, his voice choking with emotion, announced the secretary's resignation. He said Dulles was "incapacitated for carrying on the administrative load" of his office, "in addition to assisting in the making of policy."

Dulles had returned to Walter Reed Hospital just a few days before from Florida, where he had sought to build up his failing strength. While in Florida neck pains developed, and a team of medical experts in Washington made a report suggesting the abdominal cancer had spread to the lower neck.

The President said the medical findings "are not of the kind . . . that make him helpless" and announced he was keeping Dulles on as a consultant.

Of him, Eisenhower said: "I personally believe he has filled his office with greater distinction and greater ability than any other man our country has known — a man of tremendous character and courage, intelligence and wisdom."

"Highest Of All"
Former President Herbert Hoover said: "We have had many great secretaries of state. History will rank Secretary Dulles among the greatest of them — in my view the highest of them all."

Dulles' resignation brought expressions of deep sorrow from the western world's leaders.

When he returned from the south, newsmen noted he had deteriorated badly. They estimated he had lost 15 to 20 pounds of his normal 185. His face looked wasted; his clothes hung loosely.

But as he alighted from the plain, Dulles said "I feel pretty good." Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who met at the airport, remarked:

"You know Foster, he never complains."

World War I Activities
Dulles was only 29 when President Woodrow Wilson sent him on an important diplomatic mission. That was in 1917 after the vote-getters, Herbert H. Lehman, four times governor of New York. Lehman won by less than 200,000 votes out of almost five million cast.

While affable and relaxed with those he liked, Dulles was shy of manner and deeply reserved, though he possessed a shrewd sense of politics.

During his campaign, he attacked the Truman administration on its home front policies, assailing what he called "statism."

In turn, the administration sharply attacked Dulles, but 14 months later President Truman sent him to Japan as his personal envoy. He was given authority to speak directly for the President in negotiating a peace treaty for Japan.

Made Face-Finding Tour
A few months earlier Dulles had gone to Japan and Korea on a fact-finding tour. He was in Tokyo at the time the North Korean Communists invaded the republic of South Korea, of which he had been a sponsor before the U.N. That was in mid-1950.

He said at the time that the attack on the little republic came about because "the Communists seem to have felt they could not tolerate this hopeful, attractive Asiatic experiment in democracy."

A Wall Street lawyer, Dulles became deeply interested in foreign affairs early in life. His practice, reaching into international fields, gave him much practical information and background.

His maternal grandfather, John Watson Foster, served as secretary of state under President Benjamin Harrison. An aunt married Robert Lansing, who served as secretary of state under President Woodrow Wilson.

Dulles' father was a Presbyterian clergyman and he had been expected to enter the ministry. But his grandfather, the statesman, had different ideas and did much to shape his career.

Trained for Diplomat
Dulles was born in Washington Feb. 25, 1888. While his parents lived in Watertown, N. Y., his mother went to Washington to be with her mother at the time he was born, the first of five children.

When Dulles, at the age of 15, graduated from high school, his grandfather gave him a trip to Lausanne, Switzerland, to study French. That was to help prepare him for the diplomatic career he wanted the youth to follow.

He remained there for six months, then received private tutoring in Washington to permit his entrance to Princeton. Despite his youth and his statement that the "load," he was valedictorian of the class of 1908 and a Phi Beta Kappa.

Young Dulles won a fellowship at the Sorbonne in Paris. He spent a year studying international law there and travelling. It was during this period that he decided on international law as a career.

Headed New York Firm
Dulles completed a three-year law course at George Washington University in Washington in two years—he worked hard to make up the year he had spent in Europe. "Time is the most valuable thing in life and I didn't want to waste it," he explained.

When he started looking for a connection with a New York law firm, Dulles was met with a lack of enthusiasm until his grandfather heard about the difficult time he was having.

A recommendation from his grandfather got him a $50 a month job as junior law clerk with the New York law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell.

Nine years later, he became a partner and in 1927, at the age of 39, was made active head of the firm. He continued in this capacity until 1949, when he resigned to become a United States senator.

By then a wealthy man, he was able to devote all his time to foreign policy and international affairs.

In World Affairs at 19
Dulles' association with international affairs began at 19 when he went to the second Peace Conference at The Hague in 1907 as private secretary to his grandfather, who represented the Chinese government.

(Records show that in those days, foreign governments sometimes used professional diplomats of other nations to represent them at diplomatic conferences.)

Because of his knowledge of French and diplomatic usage young Dulles became one of the conference secretaries. Then a junior at Princeton, he was given special permission to delay taking his final examinations until his return.

In 1957 President Eisenhower congratulated Dulles on the 50th anniversary of his career in international affairs. He predicted that history would acclaim him as "one of our greatest Secretaries of State."

Eisenhower reviewed in a personal letter to "Dear Foster" the latter's long list of contributions "to the waging of peace" and concluded:

"My personal appreciation of your extraordinary ability has constantly grown since you became secretary of state, he followed in the footsteps of his grandfather and an uncle. He indicated in private conversations that their influence did much to shape his career.

Like many another boy of his generation, he had wanted at the age of 10 to become a locomotive engineer.

He told about that, in a half-joking speech, on his 70th birthday, saying that he had dreamed of driving "locomotive No. 999 of the New York Central Railway that had achieved the speed of 60 miles an hour."

But family tradition was strong and he turned to law and gained a world-wide reputation as an international lawyer. For many years he took an active part in the field of diplomacy as a private citizen.

A Republican, he was given active roles by three Democratic Presidents in helping to formulate and carry out United States policies. He served as an adviser on foreign policy to several secretaries of state. When President Dwight D. Eisenhower took office, Dulles was appointed secretary of state in his cabinet.

Jousted With Communism
In that capacity, he came to grips with the problem of Communist aggression.

The Russians found out at conference tables that this quiet appearing diplomat could be very firm. And so did the leaders of some friendly nations, whom he alternately urged, warned and high-pressed into oiling their guns and keeping their powder dry.

His policy in dealing with the Communists was keyed to a warning that any further aggression would be met by "retaliatory punishing power so severe that the aggression would not pay."

But communism did advance. In Indochina, French and Vietnamese officers, enemies of almost eight years of warfare there, signed an armistice in Geneva that was generally regarded as a defeat for the free world. Under its terms, much of Indochina came under Communist rule.

Aswan High Dam
Just before Nasser took over control of the canal company, the United States and Britain had withdrawn their offer to help finance a $1,300,000,000 project in Egypt, the Aswan High Dam.

Nasser had delayed accepting the offer for months while reportedly toying with the idea of making a deal with the Soviet Union for financial help. When he did decide at last to accept, the United States withdrew its part of the proposal. England took similar action the next day. The State Department said there was a need to put an end to the idea growing in many neutral countries that their best interests lay in playing off the United States and Russia against each other.

Dulles and his top policy advisers were understood to have carefully weighed the dangers involved in canceling the offer, and to have decided that in the circumstances it was best to take a calculated risk.

U.S. And Allies Split
The British and French invasion of Egypt caused a split between the United States and her two traditional allies.

Dulles introduced a resolution at an emergency meeting of the United Nations Security Council calling for a cease-fire in Egypt and the withdrawal of the foreign troops.

Russia, meanwhile, had been flexing its muscles menacingly on the side of Egypt and talking about sending "volunteers" there to fight the invaders.

(A biography of Dulles, published in the spring of 1957, said the United States faced "the brink of war" a fourth time by warning Moscow that U.S. forces would prevent Russia from sending "volunteers" to Egypt.

3 Bow To U.N.
(The biography was written by Time magazine's diplomatic reporter, John Robinson Beal, and was based partly on personal interviews with the secretary of state.)

England, France and Israel bowed to the U.N. resolution and withdrew their troops, with a U.N. police force supplanting them.

Subsequently President Eisenhower proposed—and Congress approved—a policy that augured a new and far more active period of American participation in Middle Eastern affairs.

The United States put Russia and the Mid-East countries with ally Egypt and Syria—on notice that this country was ready to fight if necessary to prevent the Middle East from being taken over by any "overt" aggression of Soviet communism.

Warning About Red Threat
While the policy was being considered by Congress, Secretary Dulles warned that Soviet communism was likely to gain bloodless domination over Western Europe unless the United States rushed aid to the Middle East.

Besides the pledge of military aid, the "Eisenhower Doctrine" gave the President authority to spend up to 200 million dollars to supply immediate military and economic assistance.

In mid-summer of 1958 the United States sent several thousand Marines and soldiers to Lebanon following the lightning overthrow of the pro-Western government of Iraq in a revolt conducted with great brutality. The 23-year-old King Faisal and his principal officials were murdered.

The United States acted at the request of the Lebanese president to prevent a similar coup in his country where pro-Nasser elements were active. Landing of the forces in Lebanon marked the first U. S. military intervention in the Middle East since World War II. The troops remained there for about six months.

Dulles was interested in broadening the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) from a defensive military alliance to a group with positive aims for world betterment. He outlined the plan in an address to the annual luncheon of The Associated Press in 1956.

Dulles did not spell out details of what he had in mind as to NATO. But he pointed to the Organization of American States as illustrating "the possibilities of a regional organization."

"It takes account of external perils," he said of OAS. "But it concentrates primarily upon its own positive accomplishments."

Among other things, OAS operated in economic and cultural fields, and sought to improve health and stimulate agriculture.

Before becoming secretary of state, Dulles had been a highly-paid lawyer who dealt in international cases, a churchman who participated in world-wide conferences and an adviser on foreign policy.

Wrote Japanese Peace Treaty
Among the accomplishments in which he took especial pride was the revengeless Japanese peace treaty — "a peace of reconciliation," he called it — after World War II.

He wrote and practically single-handedly negotiated that, along with three Pacific security pacts. At the Japanese Peace Conference in San Francisco he helped to defeat the various Russian moves to wreck the project.

President Harry S. Truman, a Democrat, offered the Republican Dulles appointment as the first post-war ambassador to Japan, but he declined it. He had been a key figure in bipartisan foreign policy cooperation with the Truman administration, serving as a close adviser to the then Secretary Dean Acheson.

While working on the Japanese peace treaty he held the rank of ambassador.

Helped Found U.N.
Dulles remained in the State Department until the Senate completed its work on the treaties. Then, early in 1952, he cut his ties with the Truman administration so as to have a completely free hand in that election year to attack those of its foreign policies with which he disagreed.

A dozen or more reporters and photographers crowded into the small Western Union office on Carlisle St. Sunday morning for a news conference with James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary. Hagerty gave fill-in details on activities in Washington for the few days following the death of John Foster Dulles Sunday morning. (AP Photo)

Out Of The Past

From the Files of the Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times
ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Military of York are making preparations for a grand demonstration there on the 4th of July. It is thought that the Law Greys, the Independent Greys and the Lafayette Guards, of Baltimore; the Marion Rifles of Hanover and probably the Independent Blues of this place, will join the Worth Infantry and York Rifles on that occasion. It will be an interesting affair.

A new Catholic Church, of brick, 40 by 70 feet, is to be erected this summer at Bonaughton on land contributed by Mr. Alexander Shorb. The work has already been commenced.

The post office at Bermudian, York county, is restored to its former site in Adams county and Solomon Lerew appointed postmaster in the place of Henry B. Smith.

The old mill on the banks of the Conewago, where the Carlisle road crosses it, formerly Major's, then Bell's and now Lower's, is meeting the fate of the buildings of the past age, being pulled down to its foundation, to make room for a large three-story merchant-mill, the lower story stone, and the two upper frame. It will contain three pairs of flouring burrs and one pair of chopping stones. It will be in running order by October, probably.

The Railroad company, we have learned, will issue tickets for a round trip to Hanover, to parties of 20 to 30 at 60 cents each; to parties of 30 and upwards at 50 cents each.

The meeting of the new Military Company at Petersburg, Y. S., to make arrangements to organize, was held at their armory on Tuesday evening last. The requisite number of members has been obtained and it promises to be a very fine company.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Local Items: Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal, of this place and Dr. R. S. Seiss, of Littlestown, attended the recent meeting of the State Medical Society at Littlestown.

The members of Corporal Skelly post attended St. James Church on Sunday morning, the pastor, Dr. Swartz delivering a very able sermon pertinent to the occasion.

Dr. E. W. Mumma of Bendersville, has been chosen District Deputy for Adams county by the I.O.O.F.
James A. Kitzmiller, Esq., leaves for the Chicago Convention on Friday. He goes as a staunch friend of Blaine and hopes to see the "Plumed Knight" made the Republican standard bearer.

Wiest's Grove, near East Berlin, has been leased by Mr. John F. Geisselman, who is making important improvements with the view of making it a favorite resort for picnic camp - meetings, etc.

To Be Remodeled: A congregational meeting of the Presbyterian church of this place was held on Saturday to determine on the remodeling of the church. The plans of Mr. Dempwolf, of York, were adopted, with some modifications. The eastern end of the audience room will be changed so as to give a pulpit recess with a pastor's study or sessions room on one side and a choir gallery on the other. The old windows on the sides and front will be replaced by large twin windows with stained glass. There will be an ornamental porch over the front entrance. The improvements will cost about $2,500.

Memorial Day: Whilst there has not been much said as to the Memorial services to be held on Friday next, May 30th, the committee have completed all arrangements and their information is that there will be a very large number of persons from all the neighboring sections of the state.

Today's Talk

BE A CREATOR OF SOMETHING

The progress of the world is handled by creators—men and women of dreams and vision. Be a creator of something! Be sure it is something useful and you can be assured it will be welcomed. How crude most inventions have been at the start! People laughed at the first automobiles and the first tests of the flying machines. The first inventions of Edison looked crude, but they stirred the imagination of thousands who went ahead to perfect and make them useful. Even the telephone keeps adding some new idea for the benefit of the multitude.

W. R. Nelson, founder of the Kansas City Star, once said to me: "No matter how good an idea may be there always is a better one." I once visited Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson. In it were many inventions he had created. Several, in a revised form, have been adapted today.

Nearly all gifted artists are creators. They put themselves upon their canvases, and writers put their lives into their books. People pay high prices for genuine antique furniture. The reason is that the designers put themselves into their creations. So do those who create anything beautiful. Children with inventive talent should be encouraged. Encourage those budding young artists in your home. Who is wise enough to measure the future?

I cannot enthuse over this so-called "Modern Art," but if its creators get fun out of it, it is all right with me! I shall not give up Nature and all her forms. Everything that she creates is a masterpiece. I love every flower that grows.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Towers of Faith" Protected, 1959, by The George Matthews Adams Service

Just Folks

WHAT COUNTS
This is the thing that counts in life,
Not the flourish or pomp or pride,
Not the medal bedecked outside;
These are symbols of earthly strife
Off won by souls unsanctified;
This is the thing that counts, you'll find:
Did you give your best to your fellow kind?

Did you toil for those that you left behind?
Did you live for them, not for self alone?
In the hearts of others will you be known?
Where will the Master your record find,
On medals of gold and columns of stone,
Or graven on the tablets of memory
By the friends you made when you used to be?

Fortunes vanish and glories fade;
Medals are junk when their wearers die;
Pomp departs with the death-closed eye;
Simply then is the soul arrayed.
This is the thing that counts on high:
Did you live your life so that others here
Knew less or sorrow and more of cheer?

Report Dogs Can Outsmart Humans

NEW YORK (AP) — In the matter of diet, dogs outsmart many humans.
Researchers for Neutrena Mills, a dog food manufacturer, say they have found that just before reaching adulthood puppies suddenly begin eating less.
A cocker spaniel, for example, when almost full grown at 24 weeks, will drop in less than a week's time from 14 ounces of food each day to as little as 8 or 9 ounces. The reason for the adjustment, the specialists say, is that the dog's system simply doesn't require as much nourishment once the growing cycle is completed.

CRASHES
MERINO, Colo. (AP) — Colorado highway patrolmen thought they were seeing double for awhile. They investigated an accident in which a car struck a cow. Later the same night, they investigated another accident involving a car and a cow. The cow escaped without injury. Damage to the two cars amounted to $475.

As will be seen from the invitation of the post, all are most cordially invited to be present, to honor the memories of the martyrs who preserved our country.
All are requested to bring flowers, as the number needed will be very large. They can be left at the Lodge in the National Cemetery or at the store of Mr. R. E. Culp on the Square.
The oration will be by the Hon. Martin Maginnis. Jacob H. Plank will be chief marshal for the parade.

REV. DR. DEITZ IS SPEAKER AT HUNTERSTOWN

The honoring of our war dead each year at Memorial Day is "essentially an act of gratitude," the Rev. Dr. Reginald W. Deitz, professor of church history at the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary, said Saturday evening in the principal address at the annual memorial exercises at the Great Conewago Presbyterian Church Cemetery at Hunterstown.

"We are grateful for our land and for its traditions of freedom and individual dignity and for its heroes of the past. We honor those heroes today but not so much the individuals as the things for which they lived and worked and fought and sometimes died," the speaker said.

The exercises followed a parade from the Methodist Church in Hunterstown with the Gettysburg Junior High School Band and a Sons of Veterans Junior Drum and Bugle Corps from New Oxford providing the music. School children, pupils of the Sunday Schools of the community, Boy and Girl Scouts and Hunterstown Ruritan Club members were in the procession.

Gives Lincoln's Address
While the high school band played, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," the children's strewed flowers on the graves of war dead that included those of the American Revolution. Sons of Union Veterans from Gettysburg conducted the memorial ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic that concluded with three volleys by a firing squad and taps by a bugler.

The program opened with the invocation by the Rev. Amos D. Meyers, pastor of the Hunterstown Methodist Church. The Gettysburg Lions' quartet sang two selections, "Tenting Tonight" and "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was presented by Fred G. Pfeffer, former burgess of Gettysburg.

Dr. Deitz described memorial services as "a very civilized thing to do with haunting echoes of great words and poignant songs to memorialize great chapters of the nation's life." He concluded with an appeal for "creativity" in memorializing and referred to Lincoln's plea "that we here highly resolve that these honored dead shall not have died in vain." He called for rededication with greater devotion to freedom, decency and hope.

Concert Rained Out
The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. William W. Ritter, supply pastor of the Great Conewago Presbyterian Church. Hugh C. McIlhenny presided during the program.
Showers had fallen before the cemetery exercises and rain that began a few minutes after their conclusion cancelled a scheduled concert by the Junior High band under the direction of Robert Zeigler. A festival was held in the Presbyterian chapel during the evening for the benefit of the cemetery association.

NEED MUSCLE TO RING BELLS

By GERALD MILLER
ALFRED, N. Y. (AP) — The bells have been ringing for Professor Ray Wingate for 22 years and frankly, he wouldn't want it any other way.

At the age of 72 he still has the wrestler's stamina needed to clang out bell concerts from the carillon tower at Alfred University.
It takes a lot of brawn plus a gymnast's agility to reach and push down all the heavy oak levers and foot pedals that touch off a tower's bells.

"I lose two pounds during a concert," says Wingate. "I turn up the heat to 85 degrees in the control room on winter days and strip to shorts and thick-soled shoes. I perspire a lot. Probably drink two quarts of water during the hour."

The exertion doesn't bother him, though. His stocky build and muscular arms are both a partial result of his arduous art and evidence that he can take it.

Shuns Easy Way
He spurns the physical ease of modern electronic keyboards for aesthetic reasons. Keyboards may take the contortions out of carillon, he explains, but they also rob the bells of poetic nuances.
"I can't vary my tones and get the expressive effect I like on an electronic instrument," he says.

Wingate's devotion to the carillon hasn't always been so keen. Until 1937 he taught singing at Alfred and his knowledge of musical bells was practically nil. Then the university installed the carillon and Wingate was picked to play it.

Wingate says there are 109 carillons in the United States but only 38 are heard because there are only 38 carillonists. He has had offers of appointments elsewhere but he always refuses.
"I don't want to leave my Alfred bells," he says.

The POWER of FAITH

by Howard Brodie

FAITH THAT AMERICANS LIVE BY — 10

Police surrounded the gangsters' hangout near Chicago. Inside was a captive, Bishop Robert Nelson Spencer, alone and unarmed, entered the stronghold, untied the prisoner and walked out with him.

"Prayer tells you what to say," said the bishop, "In a sense, I let someone else do the talking."

Crippled in one arm as a youth and uneducated until he was 18, this farm boy rose to become the Episcopal bishop of West Missouri. He is now retired. The governor recently proclaimed a day recognizing his "devoted services."

As a young minister Spencer worked on a road gang, when volunteers were called for to build new streets. He established a sanatorium for meningitis victims. He had cots and a soup kitchen set up in his church's basement for the unemployed during a freezing spell. For all this he sought no publicity, saying, "This is Christ's house... He'd probably have said: 'See that you tell it unto no man.'"

"LADIES' HATS"

Hats are truly the crowning glory... to a woman's blissful charm... although some of them are bound to... cause a portion of alarm... for they come in many colors... and a thousand different shapes... some are round and others oblong... some depict a bunch of grapes... but each one adds something extra... to the woman it adorns... like an added touch of splendor... that attracts as well as warns... yes, a hat makes all the difference... it lends beauty to her face... making many men take notice... of her qualities and grace... when I write about this subject... I am treading shaky ground... for to women hats are precious... luxuries to have around... but I'll end this bit of writing... saying chapeaux foster thrills... except when pay day rolls around... and menfolk see the bills.

MAN TRAPPED IN MUD 12 HRS.

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa. (AP) — A factory worker told today of spending 12 hours trapped in mud up to his neck while holding to a bush on the banks of the Schuylkill River to keep from going under.

Earl Sanders, 58, of Sellersville, fell into the mud Saturday night when he was fishing by himself and a bank on the river suddenly gave way.

At first he was only knee-deep. When he tried to free himself he sank up to his hips. He shouted for help but got no reply. He continued to sink until the river was just below his chin.

Then he saw a bush hanging over the collapsed bank. He grabbed it and held on.

Sunday morning Joseph Yost, of Spring City, was boating and spotted Sanders. He tied a rope under Sanders' upraised arms and then hailed a passing motorist who summoned a fire rescue unit.

Using a ladder placed on a wire stretcher across the top of the mud the fishermen were able to extricate Sanders in an hour.

"Love Story Between Me
And A Bunch Of Islands,"
Author Says Of His Book

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

HONOLULU (AP)—James A. Michener has written a new love story, a monumental novel he calls "a love story between me and a bunch of islands."

For the author of "Tales of the South Pacific" to write about islands is scarcely news, but this one is his biggest so far and he has moved his locale up to the mid-Pacific, to the Hawaiian Islands.

His new book is titled simply: "Hawaii."

It runs 400,000 words, or some 800 pages.

Calls It Best
"I think it is the best thing I've done," says Michener. "Certainly, it's the most ambitious thing I've done. I've been working on it for about three years. I started the final draft on May 1st of last year and I worked on it every day until last March 1st, except for a trip I made to San Francisco for four days."

"It is a story of how Polynesians, missionaries, Chinese parents were the baptismal sponsors. The child was born March, 1959 in the Warner Hospital, Gettysburg.

and Japanese came to these islands and learned to live together side by side," he said.

"It has two climactic moments—on Pearl Harbor day, Dec. 7, 1941, and in the elections here in 1964 when the Democrats for the first time in 56 years came into any kind of power."

"I doubt if it can be serialized or made into a movie. The characters are too numerous and they change too fast."

Islands Are Theme
The underlying thread in the book is the islands. They remain, and the people change.

"I think it is a major work, a real effort."

Michener, 52, wrote the book—his 12th—in a small office he maintains in the same eight-story apartment building at Waikiki Beach where he lives with his attractive wife, Mari.

"I got up at 7:30 every morning," he related "ate a couple of slices of pineapple, put on a pair of shorts and went to work. I admitted no interruptions. I have no phone in my office. I really went into an isolation chamber. I worked until noon, then knocked off. I never worked in the afternoon and only rarely in the evening."

ning. In the afternoon, I went beaching and I took a five-mile walk every day to keep my weight (176 pounds) down."

Wonderful Place

"The purpose of the book is to explain why Hawaii is the wonderful place it is. It deals with how people and ideas got here and how the people learned to live together in harmony. There are four families, and the book follows their fortunes."

"It would make a good movie, but I don't think it is suited for it because it takes about nine hours to show it."

Prior to writing "Hawaii," Michener wrote four novels including "Sayonara" and "The Bridge at Toko-ri," and seven works of non-fiction.

"I mailed 'Hawaii' to my publishers on March 12—the day the Hawaii statehood bill was passed by Congress," he said. "I expect it to be published in October."

Statehood also made Michener change his legal address from Bucks County, Pennsylvania, to Honolulu.

Changed Residence
"I have been here quite a while," he said, "but under no circumstances would I have changed my legal residence when I did not have the vote (for president). On the day Hawaii got the vote, I changed it."

Michener has been highly active in local politics and there's been talk in Democratic ranks of asking him to run for office. So far, he has resisted this.

RUTH ST. DENIS
ACTIVE AT 80,
STILL DANCING

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Still handsome and rhythmic at 80, dancer Ruth St. Denis is hard at work on her last great project—bringing the dance into churches.

For 60 years, Miss St. Denis has been a leading figure of the American dance. And she isn't ready to quit now. She gave some hint of her continued vitality at four score.

"The creative life—that is what I used to teach political science," Michener explained, "and I am deeply interested in it. The only function I see for myself is to be an interested member of one of the political parties. On the day I moved my legal residence here, I joined the Democratic party."

"By and large, writers are not logical people to run for office. If you write and speak the truth, you hurt enough feelings so that you can't run for office. I have no capacity for it. I will work very hard to help other people."

But, with Hawaii's first state elections coming this summer, there are some who think James Michener may still run for office.

keeps me going. I must continue creating, and that means to dance. I still do my Yoga exercises every day—including the up-ending."

"Anyone who remains alert and alive after 70 must be vitally interested in something, whether it's art or golf or space. The ones who retire and start picking at their food and complaining because their grandchildren don't visit them more often—they are sinking down slowly and slowly and losing their grip on life."

Not so Miss St. Denis. She still maintains a heavy schedule, is lecturing and dancing this week-end at the Assistance League Playhouse as the start of yet another national tour. She paused long enough to have coffee and apple pie in a Hollywood eatery.

The current passion of her life is creation of a rhythmic choir to dance to religious music. Having been a pioneer in liberating dance in the American theater, she wants to crown her career by adding dancers to worship.

"This is the most important thing I have done in the past 25 years," she explained. "We are composing a dance to the music of Gabrieli, a writer of religious music who's as pre-Bach. It is to be ready next year, and I already have had encouraging talks with leaders of the Methodist and Episcopal churches."

Miss St. Denis' figure is willowy and erect, and she talked with a crispness younger women would envy. I asked if she had any special diet.

DULLES' LIFE WAS DEVOTED TO DIPLOMACY

This is the first of three articles on the career and personality of John Foster Dulles. The writer, Ed Creagh, knew Dulles for a number of years.

By ED CREAGH

WASHINGTON (AP) — "If Foster goes to heaven, which is a pretty good bet, he will immediately start negotiations with the devil to patch things up."

This is a direct quote from a man who worked closely with John Foster Dulles, the former secretary of state who died of cancer Sunday.

He might have added that Dulles would insist on God's terms, not the devil's, in any peace settlement.

Foster Dulles—people who knew him tended to drop the "John"—was a man of ironclad moral opinions. In his book — he was a staunch Presbyterian, and his book was the Bible — black was black and white as white.

Source Of Strength
This undoubtedly gave strength to his convictions.

"Inflexible" was a word often applied to Dulles, sometimes in praise and sometimes in blame.

Nobody denied he had energy.

He flew the Atlantic and sometimes the Pacific the way most people take a streetcar. He visited 46 countries, traveling about 600,000 miles in the process, during his six years as secretary of state. He worked incredibly long hours—often in great pain as his fatal illness developed.

Dulles' personality is hard to describe. A British correspondent once referred to him as a "pawky chap." This Scottish expression has two meanings—either cunning and sly or saucy and lively.

Man Of Contrasts

Neither definition tells the whole story. Dulles was both blunt and subtle. He was, in his public days, a tallish, somewhat stooped man, ruddy of countenance, white-haired (he was 71 when he died), and endlessly active.

If any man was born to be secretary of state, Dulles was.

He was a grandson of Gen. John Watson Foster, a Civil War soldier who as secretary of state for President Benjamin Harrison.

He cut his diplomatic teeth at the Hague Convention of 1907. He went there with grandfather Foster and saw international law in the making. At that time Dulles was a junior at Princeton University. He seldom was away from foreign affairs for the rest of his life.

"Generous Gesture"

His great ambition was to follow in his grandfather's footsteps, and he did.

President Truman named him acting chairman of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations—to sit in for the then and now ailing Gen. George C. Marshall.

"A fine and generous gesture," said the firmly Republican Dulles of the Democratic President's action.

Truman gave other jobs to Dulles.

Action was what he loved. He was criticized in many quarters for his incessant travels. Some people thought he should stay in Washington, plan high policy and run the State Department instead of gadding off to Paris or Timbuktu.

At Home In Paris

But Dulles, who could put on old-fashioned carpet slippers and be almost as comfortable in a transatlantic plane as in his own living room, wanted to be where the action was. And there he went.

When the Korean armistice was announced in 1953 Dulles made a statement which goes to the heart of his thinking.

"In war men make vast sacrifices for peace," he said "and then, when peace is won, they fail to make the lesser sacrifices needed to keep the peace."

"Let us, this time, not relax, but mobilize for peace the resources, spiritual and material, which too often we reserve for war."

Nine Governors To Visit Abroad

NEW YORK (AP) — Nine governors will visit the Soviet Union next month to see how the Soviets handle regional government.

The governors — 5 Republicans and 4 Democrats—are scheduled to leave June 23 for a three-week tour of the Soviet Union. They will visit Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Tiflis and Tashkent.

They will also explore the possibility of setting up an exchange program for Soviet and American state and local officials.

Money for the tour will be provided by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.

Among the governors are Leroy Collins of Florida, Democrat; George D. Clyde, Republican, Utah; John E. Davis, Republican, North Dakota; Luther H. Hodges, Democrat, North Carolina; Robert B. Meyner, Democrat, New Jersey; Stephen L. R. McNichols, Democrat, Colorado; Robert E. Smylie, Republican, Idaho; William G. Stratton, Republican, Illinois; Cecil H. Underwood, Republican, West Virginia.

came secretary of state in 1953. Dulles observed the occasion by working as usual.

Often Target Of Criticism

He had not spent the entire half century in diplomatic work, but during a distinguished career as an international lawyer had periodically held important diplomatic assignments.

Eisenhower's appraisal of Dulles was not shared unanimously, either at home or abroad. He often was the target of sharp criticism in congressional and foreign circles.

Dulles, despite criticism and the grave world issues he faced, with a display of good humor.

Once when he was under particularly heavy fire, he recalled that when he was graduated from Princeton he was undecided what he wanted to do in life and "I took a year off to make my decisions."

"I suppose," he added, "some people wish I would take a year off to make all my decisions." Dulles said he never worried about adverse criticism. "As a matter of fact," he told an interviewer, "I don't read all that stuff about me very much. What good would it do? It would only make me mad and that would interfere with my work."

An Active Churchman

What Dulles witnessed at The Hague Peace Conference made a deep impression on him. Years later he wrote that he had seen "delegates of every nation, in the name of peace and humanity, maneuver for rules of war that would give their nation some advantage in the next war."

Although he did not enter the ministry, the Church always exerted a strong influence on his life. He sometimes contrasted the suspicious atmosphere he found in diplomatic conferences with the spirit of unity in religious activities.

He first participated in an international church conference in 1937. He had gone to Paris that year to serve as chairman of the Institute of International Cooperation, established by the League of Nations to bring together non-governmental world leaders to discuss international problems.

Finding the sessions "absolutely futile," he crossed the channel to England to attend the Oxford Conference on Church and State, a meeting of religious leaders from all over the world, and was impressed by the difference in spirit between the two gatherings.

Against Politics In Religion

Dulles came to the belief that substantial progress toward peace could come only when more persons brought Christian precepts to bear on international problems.

When he believed that the churches could exercise a decisive influence in determining the pattern of the future, he opposed politics in religion. The mission of churches, he contended, was to "get Christians to use Christian qualities in their lives as citizens."

Dulles' aptitude for law was demonstrated before he got his license to practice. When he took his bar examination he skipped several questions so as not to be late for a dinner engagement with Miss Janet Pomeroy Avery, whom he married later. Despite the answers he omitted, he passed the test.

He and Miss Avery were married in 1912. They had two sons and a daughter.

All Deeply Religious

One of the sons, Avery, was converted to the Roman Catholic faith while serving in the Navy during World War II and he became a Jesuit priest.

In 1936 he was one of 36 Jesuits ordained by Francis Cardinal Spellman in the chapel of Fordham University in New York. Secretary and Mrs. Dulles were among those present.

Secretary Dulles, a Presbyterian elder, said in commenting on his son's ordination:

"I feel very happy that my son has found a faith and the satisfaction of his faith. I have three children, all of whom are devout and religious. They have each in their own way found a communion with God, and for that I am very happy."

Dulles' daughter, Mrs. Lillias Hinshaw, was graduated in 1953 at the age of 43 from Union Theological Seminary and looked forward toward a career in the Presbyterian ministry. Her husband, Robert Hinshaw, was a public relations executive and a Quaker. They were the parents of four children.

Hitler Burned Dulles Book

From the start of his legal career, Dulles concentrated largely on cases having international angles and his success came rapidly.

Several foreign governments were clients of his firm, and he made many trips abroad.

In the years following World War I Dulles helped to re-establish stable financial conditions in a number of European and South American countries. He was chief counsel for American bondholders following the crash of Krueger and Toll, gigantic Scandinavian match trust. Creditors received 70 cents on the dollar against a prospective 7 cents.

A trip to the Orient in 1938 convinced Dulles that war between the United States and Japan was inevitable.

That same year he wrote "War, Peace and Change," a philosophical analysis of the causes of war, which was one of the books ordered burned by Adolf Hitler.

Wrote Second Book

His second book, "War or Peace," published in the spring of 1950, gave an inside view of many world problems he was familiar with and some general recommendations for keeping the world from another shooting war.

He said that Soviet communism had invented a twilight zone between war and peace in which to carry on aggression.

Dulles also wrote extensively on foreign affairs for magazines. While he sometimes appeared personally in courts, most of his work as a lawyer was done behind a broad desk in his hardwood paneled office.

His public speeches were prepared carefully except when he ran for the Senate. In a political campaign he felt that extemporaneous speeches were more effective. He traveled in a chartered bus and his stops included a number of small communities.

Had Isolated Retreat

Those who watched Dulles in action said he was at his best in those places.

He would shake hands as if he were greeting an old friend. He would stick his thumbs under his suspenders and talk freely with anyone who cared to hold an interview. He had the air and mannerisms of a small-town merchant. His intimates called him Foster.

For rest Dulles visited his Lake Ontario retreat, an 800-acre refuge known as Main Duck Island on the Canadian side of the boundary. There he led a semi-primitive existence. The place had no gas, no electricity, no stores.

There were no servants. He and Mrs. Dulles did their own chores and said they liked the life as a change from the refinements of Manhattan, where they made their permanent home. They also had a home at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., and one in Washington.

For relaxation Dulles read detective stories. "It is the detective who must put his mind to work," he explained. "My mind is relaxed as I read of his deductions and restful sleep follows."

BIG FOUR WILL RECESS TALKS

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

GENEVA (AP)—The East-West talks on Germany will be suspended Wednesday and Thursday while the Western foreign ministers fly to Washington for the funeral of John Foster Dulles.

U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter will take with him British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville. They leave Geneva Tuesday night after a brief session of the Big Four conference.

Western diplomats speculated that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko also might go to the funeral, but there was no word from Soviet headquarters to confirm or deny this.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Andrew H. Berding said he thought it possible Gromyko might fly to Washington.

Expresses Condolences

Gromyko agreed in a telephone conversation with Herter to the two-day suspension of the conference. He said he fully understood Herter's wish to attend the funeral and expressed condolences on the death of the former secretary of state.

Millions Of Free People, Except Reds, Mourn Dulles

LONDON (AP)—Millions of ordinary people around the world, remembering John Foster Dulles for his leadership in the fight against communism, today mourned his death.

Western statesmen recalled his emphasis on "face to face diplomacy" and grieved for the loss of a personal friend.

The Kremlin's leaders were silent, but Communist organs revived old criticisms of the former American secretary of state.

Sir Winston Churchill called on the world to keep in mind the example Dulles set for those "who put their trust in freedom and fair dealing."

French President Charles de Gaulle messaged President Eisenhower he deeply felt the great loss Dulles' death causes "for yourself, for your country and all men attached to freedom."

"Lost A Friend"

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer told West Germans they had lost a friend who made their cause his own.

Britain's Prime Minister Harold Macmillan remembered Dulles for his "signal force of character" which supported the highest ideals.

The official Soviet news agency reported the death in a 32-word dispatch without comment. Moscow radio reported it as the 14th item in a 17-item roundup of domestic news.

Red Tone Sour

But the East German news agency, ADN, said Dulles' name was "linked inseparably with the creation of a new war danger in Europe through the armament of Bonn." Broadcasts from other Communist states maintained that tone.

Austrians, remembering Dulles' part in bringing them a treaty of independence in 1955, expressed sadness. Chancellor Julius Raab said Dulles' death was a "great loss for the entire free world."

Indian Prime Minister Nehru named Dulles a "great servant of state."

"Work For Peace"

On Taipei, one of President Chiang Kai-shek's closest advisers said the only comfort was the knowledge that Secretary of State Christian A. Herter would continue Dulles' policies.

Vatican sources said the Vatican always "appreciated the intensity of Dulles work for peace."

Gov. Luis Munoz Marin of Puerto Rico termed Dulles a "soldier of peace who gave his life in his effort to create a conscience of peace in the world."

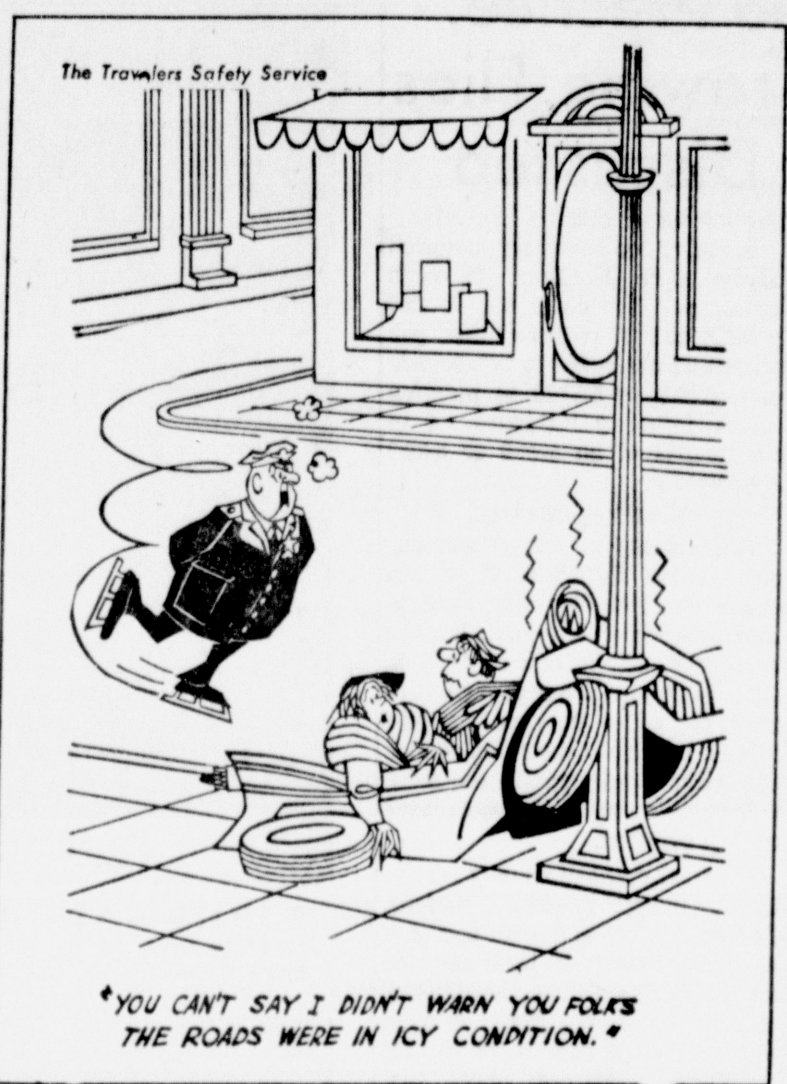

From Israel, Prime Minister

The recess comes during a critical week for the conference.

The Western ministers, apparently with some agreement or encouragement from Gromyko, are planning to engineer a gradual shift from the formal debate over the mutually rejected Soviet and Western plans for Germany to active negotiations on more pliable issues.

Herter, Couve de Murville and Lloyd's deputy, Sir Anthony Rumbold, arranged a morning meeting today to consider concrete ways of carrying on secret talks with Gromyko on arrangements for a summit meeting and other related problems.

LOCAL YOUTH WINS PRIZE ON COURT ESSAY

The son of a missionary to Argentina was announced today as the winner in the annual essay contest held by the Adams County Bar Association in connection with visits by the high school freshmen of the county to the court house during the winter terms of court.

Young Walborn received his elementary education in Argentina.

His essay was chosen as best of all written by several hundred school youngsters who visited the court house offices and attended the court sessions. The committee in charge of the essay contest portion of the program included Attorneys John A. MacPhail, chairman, John D. Thrush and Thomas Pyle.

Third prize, $5 was won by Miss Donna Byers, a student at the East Berlin School of the Bermudian Springs Joint School System. The teacher in charge was

Three Children Perish In Blaze

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Three children left alone died in a fire early today, police said, while the parents were at a lounge where the father played with a jazz band.

David Lewis, 3, and his sisters, Harriet, 1, and Robin, 6 months, died in the family's second-floor living quarters.

Police said the father, Cal, 27, and his wife Bessie, 21, arrived home about 1:15 a.m., to find the building afire.

The mother was treated at a hospital for shock and released. She told police she had locked the door before leaving when the children were asleep.

The fire was reported by a downstairs resident who smelled smoke and heard a child scream.

SAYS STATE DPI SHOULD BE DIVIDED

By BILL GIBSON

HARRISBURG (AP) — Sen. George N. Wade (R-Cumberland) said today the Public Instruction Department should be divided into two separate units.

"It's so big no one man can master it unless he has a lifetime appointment," Wade declared.

Wade, chairman of a five-member Senate committee investigating the department, believes that technical and curricula matters should be in one department and building and financial programs in another.

"Spend Money Like Water"

"Certainly the investigation so far indicates financial planning should be by one man or one group of men who are not under the Department of Public Instruction — not school men," he told The Associated Press.

Wade contended that educators "spend money like water." He claimed they dream about ideals, envision a great program, then want to spend the money for it no matter what the cost.

Cites Figures

"The fact that the department budget increased from 92 million dollars in the 1939-41 biennium to 387 million dollars in the coming biennium shows that something is going on outside the realm of good financial management," the Cumberland County Senator said.

Inflation in itself, he said, would not have more than doubled or possibly tripled the costs.

Dividing the department "may not cut the cost of education," Wade added. "But if it retards the fast-advancing cost and furnishes young folks with a good, practical education, we will have accomplished immeasurable advances."

Mrs. Palmer receives the residue of the estate valued at $1,600, all personal property.

Letters of administration were granted John E. Zeigler in the $125,000 estate of Ollie Catherine Zeigler, late of Littlestown, who died April 30. Property was listed at all personal.

Horizontal Silo Practice, Sweet Corn Growing, Flies On Livestock Discussed

By FRANK S. ZETTLE
Adams County Farm Agent

Eliminating part of the labor in livestock feeding is important to most livestockmen. This is especially true for the beef cattle producer. Many of them now use horizontal silos — trench or bunker. Self-feeding from horizontal silos has been successful for some.

Success with a horizontal silo is dependent on these four important factors:

1. Location: Put it where it is convenient to remove silage daily, or for cattle to self-feed. Avoid locating where surface water from the surrounding area will drain into it. Provide partial shelter from prevailing winds, especially if cattle are self-feeding. Snow drifting may be a problem during the winter. Make feeding surface wide enough to allow about one-fifth of the cattle to eat at a time.

2. Floor and sides: A solid floor is absolutely necessary. Many trench silos become quagmires in wet weather. Earth sides on trench silos also tend to crumble away. Eventually most owners construct permanent sides on their trenches.

3. Preservation: Proper fermentation makes good silage. Pack forage immediately. Quality of silage may be determined within a few hours after ensiling. Running a tractor in all directions over the forage repeatedly is probably the easiest way to exclude air. A preservative is also recommended.

4. Surface cover and leaching: Much loss occurs when too much surface is exposed to air and rain and snow leach away nutrients. USDA researchers report silage saved by covering with some of the modern plastic sheetings to be worth about three times what the tight cover costs. Weight covers all over with sawdust, and with railroad ties at edges.

Sweet Corn Needs Fertility
For a successful sweet corn crop, plant in a well-drained fertile field with ample organic matter. Medium loam and sandy loam soils with manure or clover sods plowed down give best results.

The amount of fertilizer to apply may vary. If you have made a heavy manure application, or plowed down a clover sod, apply 500 to 600 pounds of a 10-10-10 fertilizer. This can be broadcast and plowed down or drilled into the soil. On soils containing adequate amounts of phosphorus and potash, it is only necessary to plow down nitrogen at rate of 75 to 100 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

If the fertilizer is put on with an ordinary corn planter, keep the amount down to 200 to 300 pounds of a 5-10-5, or 5-10-10 per acre.

Apply In Bands
In planting sweet corn by hand, apply fertilizer in bands along the row 2 to 3 inches deep, and about 2 inches away from the seed, at a rate of 3 pounds of fertilizer per 100 feet of row. In clover sod or soil not manured apply more fertilizer. In such instances plow down 600 to 800 pounds of a 10-10-10 fertilizer per acre, and apply 200 to 300 pounds of a 5-10-5 or 5-10-10 at planting times. In many instances 150 to 200 pounds of an 8-24-8 or 8-32-8 is desirable.

Rid Stock Of Flies

The coming of warm weather also means fly time. Flies can cause considerable annoyance to livestock, often with damage severe enough to cause death in some animals. Even though flies may not cause physical damage to the livestock, their annoyance causes reduced gains in the meat producing animals, and decreases milk production.

Physical damage usually results from maggot-infested wounds. Calves, lambs, and pigs that are castrated during fly time are ripe for a flystrike. Unless these young animals are observed closely, much damage results before the condition is noticed. Sheep that are not "tagged" of wet wool and dung lock around their hindquarters are also defenseless against maggot infestation.

Avoid Maggots

To avoid maggot trouble castrate and dock young animals early before flytime.

If early castration is not possible, observe animals frequently until wounds are healed.

Treating wounds with pine tar or one of the newer and improved preparations, such as Smear 62 or EQ35, will repel flies and aid in healing.

Tag all sheep by shearing the wool from inside of the hind legs and around the dock to avoid filthy accumulation of wet wool and dung locks.

Jury started November 8, 1954, through the entire past year, passing the one million hour mark January 24. Orrtanna has now reached the 1,000,828 safety hours mark.

Knouse's Chambersburg plant, winner of the million-hour award last year, continued its record through 1958 and had a record of 1,301,982 hours worked without lost time till December 31. The Chambersburg branch started its current safety drive on October 15, 1954.

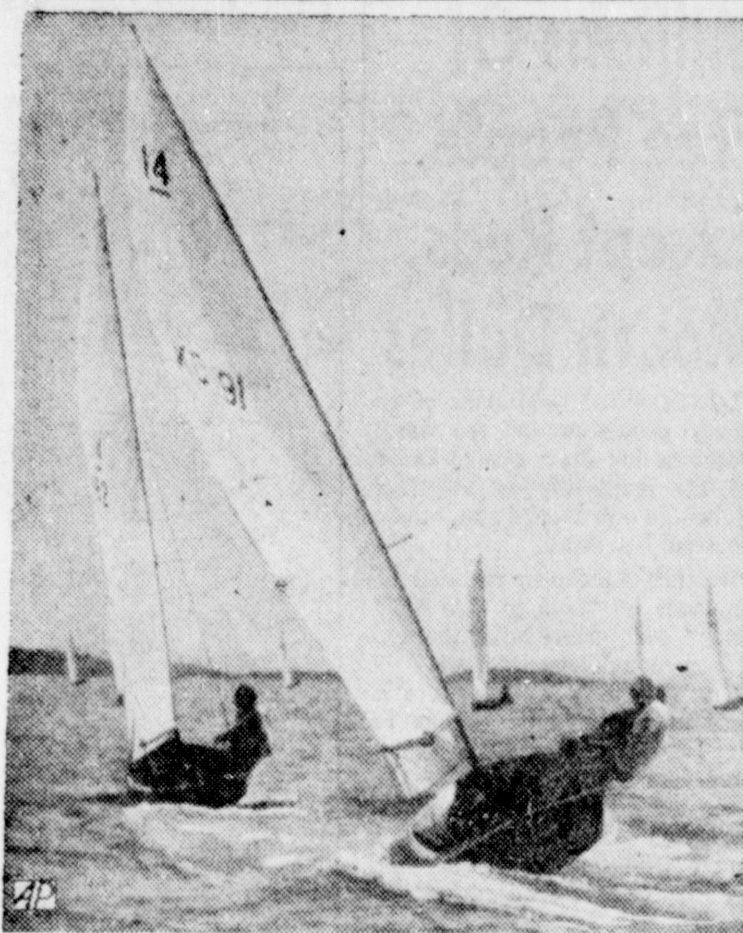

At the headquarters plant in Peach Glen employees worked a string of 236,334 uninterrupted hours of production from September 9 to December 31, 1958; and the Scotland plant by December 31 had worked 229,583 hours since its last previous lost time accident occurred October 24, 1955. The three plants received PMA's "Certificate of Merit" safety citations.

State Certificates
For having worked the entire year without a lost time accident, the Orrtanna, Chambersburg and Scotland plants received Honor Certificates from the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry. The Peach Glen plant was given a Merit Certificate for a record better than the average of the industry.

According to Hoffmaster, "Knouse Foods over the past several years has been one of the top safety award winners among the many PMA insureds throughout Pennsylvania, with three of the plants—Peach Glen, Chambersburg and Orrtanna—now having received our highest safety awards for records of over a million hours of operation without a disabling on-the-job accident."

"Considering the excellent records also being attained by the drivers," he added, "Knouse Foods Cooperative has an all-over safety record of which each employee can be extremely proud, only by each and every person down the line cooperating 100 per cent for safety."

In a brief congratulatory message...

sage, M. W. Knouse, president of Knouse Foods, had this to say of safety: "It is something we must keep with us every day . . . at every task . . . on every trip. You can't let go."

Commenting on the awards, Nowicki said, "We appreciate the cooperation of the Knouse Foods employees in our safety program, and will continue our vigorous safety efforts throughout 1959 and strive for a perfect safety record whereby no employee need suffer pain and financial loss which accompanies every acci-

SOLUTION TO KNOTTY ISSUES SEEMS REMOTE

HARRISBURG (AP) — Settlement of knotty tax and budget issues appeared as remote as ever today as the politically divided Legislature reconvened for the last week of the current two-year fiscal period.

Democratic leaders, lacking enough votes to put through the remainder of the administration's tax program, were called to a meeting with Gov. Lawrence "to see where we go from here."

Rep. Stephen McCann, Democratic floor leader, said over the weekend that he hoped to bring out some of the stalled tax measures for House action this week.

No Reason To Change

But Senate Minority Leader James Berger said Sunday night that Republican leaders "see no reason to change position" pending completion of budget studies. Some GOP leaders have said 100 million dollars can be pared from the record $1,700,000,000 budget.

Berger said Sen. George Stevens (R-Clinton), chairman of an appropriations subcommittee, informed the GOP leadership meeting Sunday night that he still has three weeks work left on the budget.

House Speaker H. G. Andrews,

in a weekend statement, called on leaders of both parties to stop "shadowboxing." He threatened to move for a lengthy recess unless the budget is balanced by July.

Have Cash Reserves

"The recess will give us time to learn whether improved business conditions will bring in more taxes than expected and also time to take a sober view of the overall problem."

The Cambria County Democrat said cash reserves in the General Fund are sufficient to carry the state through the summer and into the fall.

Berger said Andrews' recess suggestion did not come up at the GOP meeting. He declined comment on it.

Others Stalled

The only tax measure adopted so far by the Legislature is the broadened 3½ per cent sales tax.

Stalled in the House are tax measures to provide more than 200 million dollars in new revenue which Lawrence says is needed to balance the budget.

Democrats have a 108-102 edge in the lower chamber, but they have been unable to muster enough votes because some party members object to extension of the sales tax to liquor sales and auto trade-ins.

SEMINARIAN GIVES TALK AT ARENDSVILLE

"To keep faith with those who have given of their lives to provide us with our heritage of freedom and justice we must take steps necessary to see that those ideals can be passed on to the future," Alfred Bashore, Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary student, said Sunday afternoon at the annual memorial services at Arendtsville.

The program included a parade by the Biglerville High School bands and others to the town's two cemeteries and ritual and memorial services there. Luther M. Lady was master of ceremonies, Ann Ernest recited "In Flanders Field," Donald Wilkinson recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Associate Judge Clarence W. Dear-dorff conducted the ritual service for the Ira Lady Post of the American Legion and Evers Rinehart was commander of the firing squad from the Legion post.

"We will be unfaithful to the trust given us by our predecessors if we fail to seek to meet the problems of today. Today there are 2 billion, 800 people in the world and the population is increasing at the rate of 47,000,000 a year. By 1999 there will be six billion people in the world. This increasing population is most burdensome in the nations with few resources. We have nine per cent of the population and 50 per cent of the world's wealth against Asia which has 53 per cent of the people and ten per cent of the world's wealth."

"Today the world is divided into three almost equal camps, approximately 900,000,000 people in the free world, as many in the Communist world and as many in Indian and southeast Asia who comprise what we could call the uncommitted world. They have many problems, most important how to find enough to eat for their teeming millions. We must help them answer their problem lest that third of the world, now uncommitted, in its agony accept the premises of the Communist world."

NEW YORK (AP)—The 12 largest steel companies in the nation today told David J. McDonald, president of the United Steelworkers Union of America, that "it's time for you to stop trying to mislead the public."

The companies charged McDonald has been using "distortions of fact" in his weekly advertisements appealing for public support of the union in its contract negotiations with the industry.

Five Down When Small Boat Upsets

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP)—Five young people drowned today when their small boat overturned off Strawberry Island in Lake St. Clair. Three teen age girls were rescued.

The Macomb County sheriff's office said three boys and two girls were lost.

Names of the victims—all from the East Detroit and Harper Woods areas—were not immediately available.

Rescued were Marilyn Cily, 17, of Detroit; Mary Lou Gonyea, 17, of Detroit; and Nancy Benedette, 20, of Harper Woods. They were reported in good condition at St. Joseph Hospital in Mount Clemens.

SEN. ELLIOTT TALKS SUNDAY AT FAIRFIELD

State Senator Douglas H. Elliott was the speaker Sunday afternoon at the 72nd annual memorial services in Fairfield Union Cemetery.

Noting that "all over the country people gather at this time in a tribute of gratitude to the men and women of the past who gave us our heritage of freedom and justice," Senator Elliott told the group, "Unless we wish our tribute to be but a hollow tribute of words, we must prove ourselves worthy descendants of those who have gone before. We can do this by translating our tribute into action."

"We need to cooperate as a nation and as individuals. We need as individuals to keep ourselves informed of state, national and community affairs and to devote our best thought to the issues before us, and when we have reached a decision let our representatives in the county, state and federal government know our thinking."

72nd Annual Service
"We need also serve our schools, our churches, our organizations devoted to community interest, for we must help our communities to grow to carry out the dreams begun by those long long gone."

"We stand midway between those of the past and our children who will be the citizens of tomorrow. The best training we can give our youth is a good example. They will judge us, and the past, by what we do rather than by what we say."

"We can keep faith with the past. We are sharers of a great glory and a great heritage. We owe it to our descendants to hand it on intact and improved."

Joseph Lowe served as master of ceremonies for the 72nd annual memorial service. Lowe was a

WITNESSES AT CONVENTION HEAR THOMAS

"Nationalism divides people and stirs up hatred and fear," David J. Thomas, district supervisor for Jehovah's Witnesses, said Sunday at the conclusion of a three-day conference held at the Maryland State Fairgrounds, Timonium.

Harold Cluck, presiding minister of the Gettysburg congregation, said that a number of the local group were among the 1,394 Witnesses present to hear Thomas.

"Living on this earth is becoming more and more dangerous for mankind, not only physically but also morally and spiritually," Thomas said. "Yet there is no other place for mankind to move. He cannot go to the much smaller moon or some other planet. These places are not prepared for man to live forever and find a paradise of happiness."

flect more fully the glory of the Creator." He attributed the world's ills to "greed for huge profits" which has caused man to strip vast tracts of land of cover and transform it "into a waterless sea of sand and dust."

Two world wars, he said, wrecked 40 million lives. "Man no longer enjoys peace of mind. He looks fearfully to the future wondering what death-dealing plagues will next occur."

The convention attracted delegates from 19 congregations. At an immersion service Saturday 30 new ministers were baptized.

Horizontal Silo Practice, Sweet Corn Growing, Flies On Livestock Discussed

By FRANK S. ZETTLE
Adams County Farm Agent

Eliminating part of the labor in livestock feeding is important to most livestockmen. This is especially true for the beef cattle producer. Many of them now use horizontal silos — trench or bunker. Self-feeding from horizontal silos has been successful for some.

Success with a horizontal silo is dependent on these four important factors:

1. Location: Put it where it is convenient to remove silage daily, or for cattle to self-feed. Avoid locating where surface water from the surrounding area will drain into it. Provide partial shelter from prevailing winds, especially if cattle are self-feeding. Snow drifting may be a problem during the winter. Make feeding surface wide enough to allow about one-fifth of the cattle to eat at a time.

2. Floor and sides: A solid floor is absolutely necessary. Many trench silos become quagmires in wet weather. Earth sides on trench silos also tend to crumble away. Eventually most owners construct permanent sides on their trenches.

3. Preservation: Proper fermentation makes good silage. Pack forage immediately. Quality of silage may be determined within a few hours after ensiling. Running a tractor in all directions over the forage repeatedly is probably the easiest way to exclude air. A preservative is also recommended.

4. Surface cover and leaching: Much loss occurs when too much surface is exposed to air and rain and snow leach away nutrients. USDA researchers report silage saved by covering with some of the modern plastic sheetings to be worth about three times what the tight cover costs. Weight covers all over with sand, and with railroad ties at edges.

Sweet Corn Needs Fertility

For a successful sweet corn crop, plant in a well-drained fertile field with ample organic matter. Medium loam and sandy loam soils with manure or clover sods plowed down give best results.

The amount of fertilizer to apply may vary. If you have made a heavy manure application, or plowed down a clover sod, apply 500 to 600 pounds of a 10-10-10 fertilizer. This can be broadcast and plowed down or drilled into the soil. On soils containing adequate amounts of phosphorus and potash, it is only necessary to plow down nitrogen at rate of 75 to 100 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

If the fertilizer is put on with an ordinary corn planter, keep the amount down to 200 to 300 pounds of a 5-10-5, or 5-10-10 per acre.

Apply In Bands

In planting sweet corn by hand, apply fertilizer in bands along the row 2 to 3 inches deep, and about 2 inches away from the seed, at a rate of 3 pounds of fertilizer per 100 feet of row. In clover sod or soil not manured apply more fertilizer. In such instances plow down 600 to 800 pounds of a 10-10-10 fertilizer per acre, and apply 200 to 300 pounds of a 5-10-5 or 5-10-10 at planting times. In many instances 150 to 200 pounds of an 8-24-8 or 8-32-8 is desirable.

Rid Stock Of Flies

The coming of warm weather also means fly time. Flies can cause considerable annoyance to livestock, often with damage severe enough to cause death in some animals. Even though flies may not cause physical damage to the livestock, their annoyance causes reduced gains in the meat producing animals, and decreases milk production.

Physical damage usually results from maggot-infested wounds. Calves, lambs, and pigs that are castrated during fly time are ripe for a flystrike. Unless these young animals are observed closely, much damage results before the condition is noticed. Sheep that are not "tagged" of wet wool and dung lock around their hindquarters are also defenseless against maggot infestation.

Avoid Maggots

To avoid maggot trouble castrate and dock young animals early before flytime.

If early castration is not possible, observe animals frequently until wounds are healed.

Treating wounds with pine tar or one of the newer and improved preparations, such as Smear 62 or EQ335, will repel flies and aid in healing.

Tag all sheep by shearing the wool from inside of the hind legs and around the dock to avoid filthy accumulation of wet wool and dung locks.

Jury started November 8, 1954, through the entire past year, passing the one million hour mark January 24. Orrtanna has now reached the 1,000,828 safety hours mark.

Knouse's Chambersburg plant, winner of the million-hour award last year, continued its record through 1958 and had a record of 1,301,982 hours worked without lost time till December 31. The Chambersburg branch started its current safety drive on October 15, 1954.

At the headquarters plant in Peach Glen employees worked a string of 286,334 uninterrupted hours of production from September 9 to December 31, 1958; and the Scotland plant by December 31 had worked 229,583 hours since its last previous lost time accident occurred October 24, 1955. The three plants received PMA's 'Certificate of Merit' safety citations.

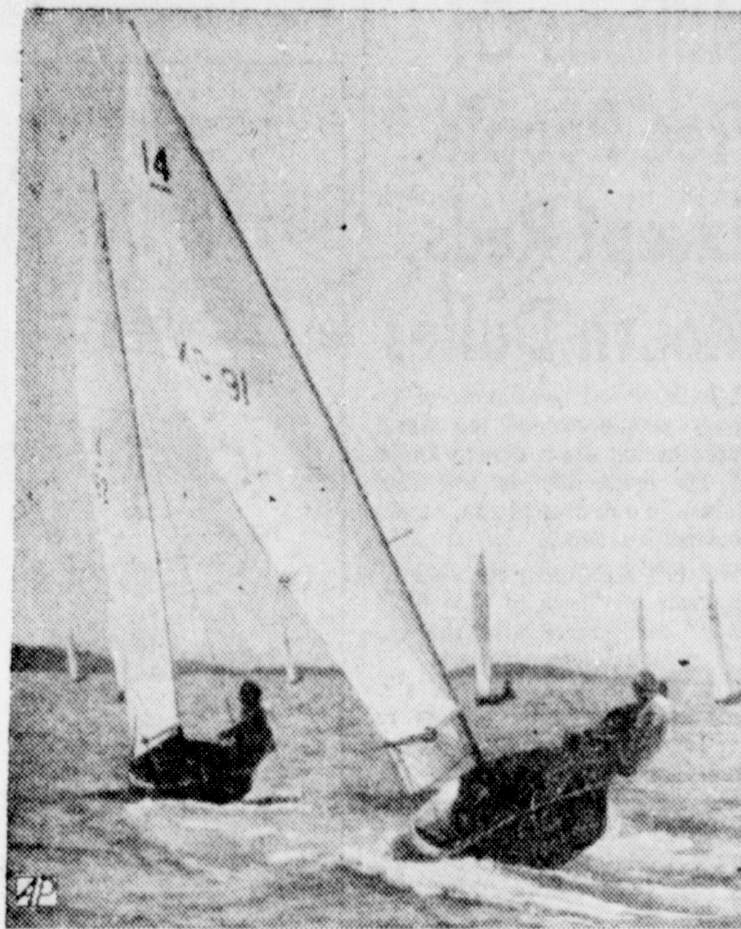

State Certificates

For having worked the entire year without a lost time accident, the Orrtanna, Chambersburg and Scotland plants received Honor Certificates from the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry. The Peach Glen plant was given a Merit Certificate for a record better than the average of the industry.

According to Hoffmaster, "Knouse Foods over the past several years has been one of the top safety award winners among the many PMA insureds throughout Pennsylvania, with three of the plants—Peach Glen, Chambersburg and Orrtanna—now having received our highest safety awards for records of over a million hours of operation without a disabling on-the-job accident."

"Considering the excellent records also being attained by the drivers," he added, "Knouse Foods Cooperative has an all-over safety record of which each employee can be extremely proud, only by each and every person down the line cooperating 100 per cent for safety."

have seen the start of development of atomic power, we have seen change after change in our own country, and throughout the world.

Formula For Vision

"And we have observed our western world suffering from a spiritual near-sightedness. We have shown far too little vision as we moved to meet the problems that have arisen to shake our security."

"We have a formula for vision. It begins with remembrance of things past. The men of the Bible had the greatest vision because they remembered what God had done for them. Our vision can be only as bright as our faith in God and our belief in His goodness and omnipotence."

"Yet while we need vision we cannot see into the future. No man knows what tomorrow will bring. But with faith in God we can have confidence in the future and belief in it."

Knowledge And Faith

"We need a vision that can tell us that even our believed failures can be a high success. There is a story of three trees. One dreamed of becoming part of a great palace, and thought itself a failure because it became part of a stable — but Christ was born there. Another dreamed of being part of a great ship sailing the mighty oceans. It thought it failed because it became part of a simple fishing boat — but it was a boat from which Christ taught. Another had its great dreams shattered by being chosen for a Cross — on which Christ could redeem the world."

"With knowledge of the past, with faith in God, we can have the confidence we need to face an unstable and unknown future with the vision we need, lest we perish."

SOLUTION TO KNOTTY ISSUES SEEMS REMOTE

HARRISBURG (AP) — Settlement of knotty tax and budget issues appeared as remote as ever today as the politically divided Legislature reconvened for the last week of the current two-year fiscal period.

Democratic leaders, lacking enough votes to put through the remainder of the administration's tax program, were called to a meeting with Gov. Lawrence "to see where we go from here."

Rep. Stephen McCann, Democratic floor leader, said over the weekend that he hoped to bring out some of the stalled tax measures for House action this week.

No Reason To Change

But Senate Minority Leader James Berger said Sunday night that Republican leaders "see no reason to change position" pending completion of budget studies. Some GOP leaders have said 100 million dollars can be pared from the record $1,700,000,000 budget.

Berger said Sen. George Stevens (R-Clinton), chairman of an appropriations subcommittee, informed the GOP leadership meeting Sunday night that he still has three weeks work left on the budget.

House Speaker H. G. Andrews,

in a weekend statement, called on leaders of both parties to stop "shadowboxing." He threatened to move for a lengthy recess unless the budget is balanced by July.

Have Cash Reserves

"The recess will give us time to learn whether improved business conditions will bring in more taxes than expected and also time to take a sober view of the overall problem."

The Cambria County Democrat said cash reserves in the General Fund are sufficient to carry the state through the summer and into the fall.

Berger said Andrews' recess suggestion did not come up at the GOP meeting. He declined comment on it.

Others Stalled

The only tax measure adopted so far by the Legislature is the broadened 3½ per cent sales tax.

Stalled in the House are tax measures to provide more than 200 million dollars in new revenue which Lawrence says is needed to balance the budget.

Democrats have a 108-102 edge in the lower chamber, but they have been unable to muster enough votes because some party members object to extension of the sales tax to liquor sales and auto trade-ins.

SEMINARIAN GIVES TALK AT ARENDSVILLE

"To keep faith with those who have given of their lives to provide us with our heritage of freedom and justice we must take steps necessary to see that those ideals can be passed on to the future," Alfred Bashore, Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary student, said Sunday afternoon at the annual memorial services at Arendtsville.

The program included a parade by the Biglerville High School bands and others to the town's two cemeteries and ritual and memorial services there. Luther M. Lady was master of ceremonies. Ann Ernest recited "In Flanders Field." Donald Wilkinson recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Associate Judge Clarence W. Deardorff conducted the ritual service for the Ira Lady Post of the American Legion and Evers Rinehart was commander of the firing squad from the Legion post.

"We will be faithful to the trust given us by our predecessors if we fail to seek to meet the problems of today. Today there are 2 billion, 800 people in the world and the population is increasing at the rate of 47,000,000 a year. By 1999 there will be six billion people in the world. This increasing population is most burdensome in the nations with few resources. We have nine per cent of the population and 50 per cent of the world's wealth against Asia which has 53 per cent of the people and ten per cent of the world's wealth.

"Today the world is divided into three almost equal camps, approximately 900,000,000 people in the free world, as many in the Communist world and as many in Indian and southeast Asia who comprise what we could call the uncommitted world. They have many problems, most important how to find enough to eat for their teeming millions. We must help them answer their problem lest that third of the world, now uncommitted, in its agony accept the premises of the Communist world."

Five Drown When Small Boat Upsets

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP)—Five young people drowned today when their small boat overturned off Strawberry Island in Lake St. Clair. Three teen age girls were rescued.

The Macomb County sheriff's office said three boys and two girls were lost.

Names of the victims—all from the East Detroit and Harper Woods areas—were not immediately available.

Rescued were Marilyn Gily, 17, of Detroit; Mary Lou Gonyea, 17, of Detroit; and Nancy Benedette, 20, of Harper Woods. They were reported in good condition at St. Joseph Hospital in Mount Clemens.

SEN. ELLIOTT TALKS SUNDAY AT FAIRFIELD

State Senator Douglas H. Elliott was the speaker Sunday afternoon at the 72nd annual memorial services in Fairfield Union Cemetery.

Noting that "all over the country people gather at this time in a tribute of gratitude to the men and women of the past who gave us our heritage of freedom and justice," Senator Elliott told the group. "Unless we wish our tribute to be but a hollow tribute of words, we must prove ourselves worthy descendants of those who have gone before. We can do this by translating our tribute into action.

"We need to cooperate as a nation and as individuals. We need as individuals to keep ourselves informed of state, national and community affairs and to devote our best thought to the issues before us, and when we have reached a decision let our representatives in the county, state and federal government know our thinking.

72nd Annual Service
"We need also serve our schools, our churches, our organizations devoted to community interest, for we must help our communities to grow to carry out the dreams begun by those long gone.

"We stand midway between those of the past and our children who will be the citizens of tomorrow. The best training we can give our youth is a good example. They will judge us, and the past, by what we do rather than by what we say.

"We can keep faith with the past. We are sharers of a great glory and a great heritage. We owe it to our descendants to hand it on intact and improved."

Joseph Lowe served as master of ceremonies for the 72nd annual memorial service. Lowe was a

WITNESSES AT CONVENTION HEAR THOMAS

"Nationalism divides people and stirs up hatred and fear," David J. Thomas, district supervisor for Jehovah's Witnesses, said Sunday at the conclusion of a three-day conference held at the Maryland State Fairgrounds, Timonium.

Harold Cluck, presiding minister of the Gettysburg congregation, said that a number of the local group were among the 1,394 Witnesses present to hear Thomas.

"Living on this earth is becoming more and more dangerous for mankind, not only physically but also morally and spiritually," Thomas said. "Yet there is no other place for mankind to move. He cannot go to the much smaller moon or some other planet. These places are not prepared for man to live forever and find a paradise of happiness."

Denying the need for a new planet, Thomas said the earth "could be fair, pleasant and re-

Homemade Plane Fails Taxi Test

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—An airplane failed its Federal Aviation Agency tests Sunday because it didn't stay on the ground.

The plane, a homemade craft called the Cougar Kitten, was being put through taxi tests for FFA inspectors R. K. Beckelman and Albert Sanell.

Suddenly, the plane arched gracefully into the air, climbed about 20 feet, then crashed. Pilot and builder Robert E. Nesmith suffered a bruised shoulder.

MOSCOW (AP)—A Soviet TU104 jetliner today took Premier Nikita Khrushchev off for his first visit to Albania. Some 500 persons, including 45 ambassadors and 30 Albanians, were at the airport to see Khrushchev off. He will spend two weeks in the little Communist country on the Adriatic.

He attributed the world's ills to "greed for huge profits" which has caused man to strip vast tracts of land of cover and transform it "into a waterless sea of sand and dust." Two world wars, he said, wrecked 40 million lives. "Man no longer enjoys peace of mind. He looks fearfully to the future wondering what death-dealing plagues will next occur."

The convention attracted delegates from 19 congregations. At an immersion service Saturday 30 new ministers were baptized.

MEMORIAL SERVICES ARE HELD SUNDAY

"Freedom cannot be guaranteed, it must be secured by each succeeding generation," the Rev. Dr. Frederick K. Wentz, professor of historical theology at the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary, said Sunday afternoon at the annual Memorial services in Biglerville.

The program included a parade by school children, the Biglerville High School Bands, Ira Lady Post of the American Legion and others through Biglerville to the cemetery.

Charles L. Yost, high school principal was master of ceremonies. Larry Kennedy recited "In Flanders Field" and Robert Campbell recited Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address." The military rites were conducted by the Ira Lady American Legion Post under the direction of Clarence Evers Rinehart, firing squad commander.

Using as his theme a statement by St. Paul "What Do You Have That You Did Not Receive," Dr. Wentz said "We receive so many things, our health, our ideas, our comforts, for which we take credit for ourselves, but which actually are our heritage."

"We sing, 'let freedom ring,' because we hold a noble spiritual heritage which makes it possible. Our forefathers who secured the Magna Carta, the men of the Revolution, the men who have lived since then have, under God, been able to hand down this heritage."

President is

10 o'clock the statement was relayed to a waiting press corps at the local Western Union office.

Flash To World

Mr. Hagerty read the statement over the telephone from the White House. One of the White House correspondents and a correspondent for a large daily typed it out, each making several carbon copies. When it was completed the copies were distributed to the other correspondents and radio and TV reporters who immediately flashed it to their waiting offices.

The President had arranged to attend the 8:30 o'clock service at the Presbyterian church but at the last minute called it off so that he could write his Dulles statement.

Issues Proclamation

The President was too visibly moved by the death of his personal friend and able associate to hold a press conference, turnage to us.

"Yet they cannot guarantee it, it is we who must assume the duty of retaining it."

"Today, perhaps, we have more fear than freedom. Let us remember that freedom must have deep roots in faith if it is to have any meaning. If man is not an individual created by God, then freedom has no meaning whatever. Today there are many who would deny God, but seek freedom. They are drawing from a past heritage they deny. Our national song speaks truthfully when it couples 'let freedom ring' with 'Our fathers' God . . . author of liberty.'"

About 11:30 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Hagerty drove to the Western Union office where he held a brief press conference. He said the President and Mrs. Eisenhower would return to the White House early in the afternoon and that later in the day the President would issue a "proclamation on the death of John Foster Dulles to the people of the nation." Hagerty said the President was working on that proclamation at the time.

Hagerty also said that the President had ordered all flags at half staff over all U.S. government buildings around the world and to remain at half-staff until after the funeral services. "The flags are at half-staff at the farm now," Hagerty added.

Will Attend Services
The press secretary also announced that the President and Mrs. Eisenhower would attend funeral services at Washington's Episcopal Cathedral and that the President also would go to Arlington National Park for the interment. He said he did not know whether Mrs. Eisenhower would go to the cemetery.

Hagerty said that the President had cancelled all "out of office" appointments until after the services but that he would continue to carry on the duties of the President. One of the cancellations was a trip to the Beltsville, Md., Agriculture Department's research center. A garden party for "mature citizens" scheduled for this afternoon at the White House for Mrs. Eisenhower has also been cancelled. The guests were to have been aged women who are in homes for the aged in and near Washington.

Presents Medal
Less than six weeks ago the President had announced, with tears in his eyes, that cancer had forced Dulles' resignation from the Cabinet. Only last Tuesday he had conferred on Dulles the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest award to civilians.

President and Mrs. Eisenhower called on Mrs. Dulles and her family after they returned to Washington Sunday afternoon.

Rose, Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Barry Breighner, Gettysburg; Mrs. Donald Smith, Rockville, Md.; Mrs. Robert S. Weikert, Gettysburg, and Mrs. Edward Kane, Baltimore. They wore gowns similar to the maid of honor except they were yellow organza with matching headpieces.

William Signor, brother of the best man. Ushers were James Snead, brother of the bride; Charles Myers, cousin of the bride, Philadelphia; Robert Weikert and Kenneth Bupp, Gettysburg.

Reception Held

The bride's mother was dressed in a pink silk organza dress with a scoop neckline and cap sleeves. The full skirt had a bustle in the back with a petal skirt. She chose pink accessories and had a corsage of white rosebuds. The groom's mother wore a light blue sheer dress with a "V" neckline and scallop trim. Pink rosebuds made up her corsage.

The page was Jeffrey Swope, Gettysburg; ring bearer, Elwood Albin, Littlestown, cousin of the bride, and flower girl, Jeanne Engle, Baltimore, cousin of the bride. Miss Engle wore a white floor-length gown of white embroidered nylon over taffeta with a flowing taffeta panel which hung to the hem of the dress. Her matching crown headpiece also was white. She carried a basket of assorted spring flowers.

A reception was held in the church dining hall following the ceremony. The couple left for a week's wedding trip through the southern states. The bride chose for her going away outfit a baby blue dacon dress with a full skirt, cap sleeves, embroidered bodice with white accessories and white rosebud corsage. Upon returning, they will live at 113 Seminary Ave.

Both Employed Here

The bride graduated from Gettysburg High School in 1957 and is employed here as secretary to the Pennsylvania Motel Association. Mr. Signor, a graduate of the local high school in 1952, served two years with the U.S. Army and is employed in the loan department of the Gettysburg National Bank.

Out-of-town guests came from York, Hanover, Pottsville, Chambersburg, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Arlington, Va., Rockville, Md., Washington, D. C., Trenton, N. J., and Central Islip, N. Y.

250 Scouts Attend Spring Camporee

About 250 Boy Scouts, Explorers and leaders of Conewago Boy Scout District attended the annual weekend spring camporee at Camp Conewago, Dick's Dam. Winning awards for the best campers were: Boy Scouts—first, Mighty Eagle patrol of Troop 114, sponsored by Harold H. Bair Post 14, American Legion, folding charcoal stove; second, Wolf patrol of Troop 116, Grace United Church of Christ, combination camp pick and shovel, and third, Cheyenne patrol of Troop 85, New Oxford, 100 feet of scouting rope. Explorers—first, Crew 1, Post 101, St. Mark's Lutheran Church, folding charcoal stove.

The awards were presented by Rush K. Little, member-at-large of the district committee. Individual camper medallions of the York-Adams Area Boy Scout Council were presented to each person attending by John C. Huston, chairman of the district camping and activities committee.

Serving on the camp staff were: Norman L. Harman, camp director, and Frank Altland, Merrill Yohe and John Altland, assistants. All are neighborhood commissioners. John Altland is affiliated with the Indian Rock District.

for called her at her home with the word that her husband of 47 years was sinking rapidly.

Her son, John, an engineer from Mexico City, and another son, Avery, a Jesuit priest studying here, reached the hospital shortly before she arrived. Dulles' younger brother, Allen, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and his sister, Eleanor, a State Department official specializing in German problems, arrived a short time later.

In silence they watched as Dulles' heavy breathing became more strained. It stopped once, then resumed, before the end came.

One of the family asked "Is it all over?" and a doctor nodded.

Heavy doses of pain-killing drugs had kept Dulles sleeping most of the time during his final days. At times he could not recognize members of his family, but on the day before his death he recognized his wife and managed to speak a few words to her.

In addition to family members present when he died, Dulles is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Robert Hinshaw, a Presbyterian minister who lives in New York, and two married sisters, Margaret Edwards of Rye, N.Y., and Natalie Seymour, Utica, N.Y.

President At Farm

Eisenhower was at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm when Dulles died. The President's own physician, Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, phoned him about 6:30 a.m. with the word that Dulles' condition was extremely critical. An hour and 20 minutes later, as the President was preparing to attend church services, Dr. Snyder called again to tell the President Dulles was dead.

The President canceled plans to go to church. Instead, he went to the sun porch of his country home and penciled a tribute to Dulles. "John Foster Dulles," the President wrote on a yellow pad, was "one of the truly great men of our time . . . a champion of freedom and foe only to tyranny . . . his countrymen all who believe in justice and the rule of law grieve at the passing from the earthly scene of one of the truly great men of our time."

LITTLE ROCK IS VOTING ON BOARD OUSTER

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The controversy over school integration in Little Rock reaches another critical point today with a school board recall election.

At stake were all six seats on the board — now evenly divided between segregationists and moderates.

The election—expected to draw a record vote of 30,000 — was looked on as a test of strength between adherents of Gov. Orval E. Faubus and citizens protesting the firing of 44 teachers and administrators by the three segregationist board members.

Also in the background of the clash are conflicting opinions over the governor's closing of the city's four high schools to prevent integration.

Will Name Replacements

A majority vote will determine whether each member will be continued in office or ousted.

If any board member is voted out, a replacement will be named by the Pulaski County Board of Education.

The 44 teachers and administrators were fired May 5. The firing list was presented by the segregationist board members. The three moderates then walked out of the meeting, saying that left no quorum.

No reason for the dismissals was given at the time.

Later, however, Board President Ed I. McKinley Jr., a segregationist, said that teachers who believed the U.S. Supreme court's desegregation decision was the law of the land "have no place in our school system, however qualified otherwise."

After the dismissal vote while the three moderate board members were absent, a campaign was started to recall the three segregationist members — McKinley, Ben Rowland and Robert Laster.

Melk concentration camp. Muzikant was arrested last April 30 after witnesses in another war crimes trial described him as one of the most brutal men on the staff of the Mauthausen camp. He had been living here in seclusion as a worker.

The former sergeant reportedly said he killed the inmates, all of them on the sick list, under a camp directive ordering the killing of "useless eaters." All were killed in the Melk camp between February and April 1945.

The state prosecutor said Muzikant would probably go on trial in July.

Planning to make pickles this summer? Remember that distilled white vinegar will not impart the brownish color associated with cider vinegar. The latter gives good flavor, however, so you may use it where color isn't an important factor.

Dulles Was

On April 23 he drove out to the hospital and commissioned his old friend a special consultant on foreign policy. Dulles was clearly pleased.

But Dulles and his critics, too. Some accused him of rigidity and failure to develop dynamic new ideas. They also said he casually brought the United States to the brink of war time after time.

Some Nervousness

There were headshakings in Allied capitals, too. Various free world diplomats showed occasional nervousness—or even alarm—at what they called a Dulles' predilection for stirring up the Russians.

His theory of brinkmanship, as it came to be called, was that the United States would on occasion have to face up to a Communist challenge and go to the brink of war, if necessary, to defend a free country.

Perhaps Dulles' worst time came in the Suez Canal crisis of 1956 when Egypt seized the internationally owned waterway. Britain and France attacked Egypt, after Israel had made an attack of its own.

Moves Denounced

Dulles chose to denounce the moves against Egypt, even though

Miss Donna Kane, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a ballerina-length gown of pale blue chiffon over taffeta with a matching picture hat. She carried a cascade bouquet of blue and white carnations.

Harold Shriner, Fairfield, friend of the bridegroom, served as best man. The ushers were Carson Lowe, brother of the bridegroom, and Ronald Shindler, R. 2, friend of the bridegroom.

of white tea roses. The groom's mother wore a navy blue sheath dress with white accessories and a corsage of white tea roses.

Reception Is Held

Richard Orner, Jr., Fairfield, R. 1 nephew of the bride served as ring-bearer. Julia Orner, Fairfield, R. 1, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a waltz length gown of white nylon chiffon with a blue sash and a matching blue picture hat. She carried a basket of blue and white flowers.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Fairfield fire hall, after which the couple left for a wedding trip of unannounced destination. For her going away outfit the bride wore a dress of blue flowers on a white background and white accessories. Upon their return the couple will reside at the home of the bridegroom.

The bride attended Delone Catholic High School. The groom is a 1958 graduate of Fairfield High School and is presently employed at the Pen-Moc Shoe Co., in Fairfield.

Out-of-town guests were from Clinton, Towson, Keyman and Emmitsburg, Md.; Quincy, Waynesboro, Hanover, New Oxford and Gettysburg, Pa.

Pacific Coast Conference Is Dead

SEATTLE (AP) — The Pacific Coast Conference is dead today after 44 years of lively existence.

The dissolution was finalized Sunday by the faculty athletic representatives who have been the conference bosses.

UCLA said it will never again meet Oregon or Washington State athletically. California, Washington, Southern California and UCLA have formed a "Big Four" and will take over the Rose Bowl game after 1960. Stanford, Oregon State, Idaho, Washington State and Oregon will operate independently.

This meant getting into a position of siding with the Soviet Union in the United Nations against Britain and France. It took a year to repair the Allied relations.

One of the great disappointments that attended Dulles' resignation was the knowledge that he could not take part in a Big Four summit conference.

Incomes, Buying Power Of Americans Never Higher

By WALTER BREEDE JR. on toward new peaks.
NEW YORK (AP)—A prosperous America counted its blessings this week as the economy rolled on toward new peaks. Incomes and buying power of Americans were never higher.

employment lower, than at any time since the 1957-58 recession. Flies in the ointment included the prospect of a summer let-down in factory employment, and a continuing upward trend in living costs.

A U.S. Labor Department report showed that sharply rising state and local taxes—plus higher costs of transportation, medical care and family fun—boosted your living costs in April to the record highs of July and November last year.

Continue Spending
Your food bill was lower (egg prices were the lowest since 1956) but not low enough to offset the rise in other items.

Consumers kept on spending at a record pace this week. But, according to bankers, retail executives and other experts who watch such matters closely, there was no sign of a reckless spending binge—no evidence that Mr. and Mrs. American Consumer had become inflation-minded.

Bankers said people are still saving money—and at an exceptionally fast pace. "The flow of over-the-counter savings is running well ahead of the record pace of last year," reported Norman Strunk, executive vice president of the United States Savings & Loan League. Deposits in the nation's savings and loan associations, he said, showed a net increase in the first four months this year of nearly two billion dollars.

Progress Report
Consumer willingness to take on instalment debt showed up in a progress report by Arthur O. Dietz, president of C.I.T. Financial Corp. Last month, he said, C.I.T. stepped up its financing business nearly 42 per cent over April, 1958, when business was still mired in the recession.

Stock sales totaled 15,969,910 shares in the latest week compared to 18,115,455 shares in the week before and 12,536,930 in the same week last year. Bond sales in the latest week had a par value of $26,099,000 against $30,000,000 for the previous week and $28,525,200 for the corresponding 1958 week.

DELAWARE TOWNSHIP, N. J. (AP)—A worker was fatally injured Friday when he fell 15 feet from a scaffold at the Hussman Refrigeration Co. plant under construction here. He was Jesse Stone, of Wawa, Pa., who died in Cooper Hospital, Camden.

FARMER UNIT QUILTS STATE LABOR BOARD

HARRISBURG (AP)—The Pennsylvania Farmers' Assn. has pulled out of the governor's Migrant Labor Committee because it cannot permit its organization to be used as "a tool to bring about conditions to which the members are opposed."

The association announced its withdrawal Sunday in a letter to Gov. Lawrence which contained a series of bitter charges against the committee's leadership, members and activities.

William L. Batt Jr., secretary of labor and industry and chairman of the Migrant Labor Committee, said he was "very sorry" to hear of the association's action.

Resent Batt's Words

"They've been very helpful in developing the committee," the said. "We'll miss the farmers' association, particularly since we perform a large function in the department in recruiting labor for the farmer members of that association — which we will, of course, continue to do."

The letter, written by C. M. Wilson, association secretary, charged that Batt had accused farmers of housing migrant workers in "pig pens."

"We do not and never have condoned the few farmers who fail to keep their quarters (for migrant laborers) up to a reasonable standard, but we don't think it becomes the privilege of a public official to condemn all farmers nor all the citizens because of the actions of a few."

The farmers' group also charged that the committee has become "involved deeply" in lobbying and that Batt "has, on occasion, refused to accept statistical evidence from . . . but has chosen to use his own evidence."

Wilson also said the committee "is comprised predominantly of executives and employees of the state government, and that agriculture is in such a great minority as to be completely ineffective."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

PLAINVIEW, Tex. (AP) — Two months ago as Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Harber went to visit their son in Maracaibo, Venezuela, Harber put a note in a bottle, sealed it and dropped it into Maracaibo Harbor.

The note gave Harber's address and promised the finder $5 if he would contact him.

A few days ago, Harber heard from Dunnen Weiswander, 19, Melbourne, Fla. Weiswander said he found the bottle on Melbourne Beach, 30 miles south of Cape Canaveral.

Harber figured the bottle would have had to travel about 40 miles per day to reach the Florida coast that quickly.

Weiswander got his $5. 7,500 pedestrians were killed by autos;

MANY TOTS ARE SUFFOCATED IN PLASTIC BAGS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Harmless-looking transparent bags have become death traps because of a penchant youngsters have of pulling the bags over their heads and courting death by suffocation.

More than two dozen tots have met their death in this manner already this year. The National Safety Council fears the death toll may rise to 100 before the year is out.

The bags are the type used largely by dry cleaning establishments for returning cleaned apparel. The material also is used for covering pillows and crib mattresses.

Legislation has been pressed to have the bags perforated or clearly marked "dangerous."

"Cautious" Label

The ordite Corp. of Macedon, N.Y., claiming to be the nation's leading manufacturer of plastic garment bags, announced Friday it is supplying labels to cleaning establishments to be slipped over the hangers of clothes being returned in the bags. The labels read:

"Caution. For safety reasons keep plastic bags away from children as you would matches or medicine."

But some officials hold that responsibility rests with the parents

BLONDE QUITS PALACE TO TRY SELLING GAME

By RAYMOND E. PALMER

LONDON (AP) — The blonde English wife of an Indian prince got bored with all that palace life. She is selling washing machines in London.

"Just call me an ordinary girl," said the Maharani of Mysore, once the mistress of a 20-room mansion, a big staff of servants and five automobiles.

"Forget the title. I'm Janet Hicks again."

The lovely 23-year-old was demonstrating a washing machine in a West End store. She pushed a shirt into the soap suds before a crowd of Cockney housewives.

Parties And Idleness

"My days of luxury may be over, but I've never been happier," said Janet.

Miss Hicks and the maharaja met three years ago in an English hotel. He was a guest, she the receptionist. They were married after a whirlwind courtship.

Prince Dulu — as she called him — whisked her off to high life in Calcutta.

"It was just one long round of parties and idleness," said the reformed maharani.

Shares Apartment

"It got so boring I wanted to take a job. But Dulu wouldn't hear of it."

"Now at least I'm doing something useful and earning my own living."

The beauty who gave up a palace now shares a small apartment with a girl friend.

Miss Hicks is separated from the maharaja, but there has been no divorce.

—to keep the bags out of children's reach. A number of the victims have been infants less than a year old.

Speeding was blamed for 13,200 deaths on U. S. highways.

VALDES FIGHT ON TV TONIGHT

Alonzo Johnson, a new face from Pittsburgh, gets his chance to show on the big time Friday when he boxes big Nino Valdes of Cuba at Madison Square Garden.

Johnson has won 11 straight since he suffered the only defeat in his 16-bout pro career.

The fight will be covered by NBC radio and TV.

Tony Anthony, ranked 1-2 among the light heavy challengers to Archie Moore, dips back into the 175-pound ranks again to box Jesse Bowdry of St. Louis on the Wednesday show (ABC TV) at the Chicago Stadium.

Anthony bounced back from an upset by Reuben Vargas to beat Sonny Ray for the second straight time, March 20. Ray stopped Bowdry at Chicago last September. In fact, Bowdry has lost only three of 29 fights, and each time it has been Ray who did the trick.

In March 1943, the first members of the Navy's Women's Reserve (WAVES) reported to hospital corps schools for instruction provided by Navy Nurses.

CONTROVERSY FLAMES ANEW FOR BAPTISTS

By TOM HENSHAW

AP Religion Writer

The long controversy surrounding the 100-year-old Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., flamed anew at the Southern Baptist Convention's annual meeting during the past week.

The seminary, oldest in the denomination, made news last year when 13 of its 44 professors were fired in an apparently insoluble disagreement with its president, the Rev. Dr. Duke K. McCall.

"ET TU" BRIGETTE

TOLEDO Ohio (AP) — A free Brigitte Bardot movie was sponsored by a theater appreciation group which passed the hat through the audience for contributions to a fund to stage Shakespearean and other classic plays.

24 Navy Nurses on Guam established a school of nursing for young Chamorro women in conjunction with the Navy's native hospital in 1911.

As a result, the seminary faces loss of its accreditation by the American Assn. of Theological Schools, and Southern Baptists are thinking of withdrawing all six of their seminaries from the association.

Levels New Charges

Last week, at the denomination's Louisville convention, the Rev. James S. Bulman of East Spencer, N.C., a frequent critic of Southern Baptist procedures, leveled a new charge against the embattled seminary.

He said he has "what I consider clear and conclusive evidence" that the seminary is teaching that Christ's virgin birth and resurrection may be looked upon as myths — a contradiction of Southern Baptist doctrine.

Dr. McCall has denied that the seminary departs from the orthodox theological position.

NEWSPAPER EVANGELISM

The United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., meeting in Indianapolis, announced plans to evangelize an unspecified Midwestern city through the use of newspaper advertising.

Dr. Glenn Warner Moore, secretary of the denomination's general council, said the same type of project was tried on a non-denominational basis in Rochester, N.Y., with gratifying results.

"We want to interest people in Christianity — not just the Presbyterian church," he said. "in planning these ads we are thinking of people we never see in church."

KALEIDOSCOPE SHOW RATED BEST OF YEAR

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—As the television season draws to a close I don't recall any personal triumphs connected with it. But I do have some regrets. For example:

I regret that I was not conducting this column a week ago when "NBC Kaleidoscope" presented "Our Man in the Mediterranean" so that I could have praised it as one of the best shows of the year.

In an age when a reporter's worrisome attitude is sometimes mistaken for profundity, David Brinkley and his camera crew calmly, dryly — and profoundly — examined the westward course of so-called civilization through eight Mediterranean countries.

Imprint On Sands
Brinkley wryly observed the efforts of man to leave his imprint from the sands of Cairo to the sands of Cannes in a program that transcended the old categories of "travelogue" or "news report."

NBC should send its man Brinkley more places to bring us further reports that make us feel we have had a beneficial journey. Failing that, let's have a summer repeat of "Our Man in the Mediterranean," please.

I regret that I haven't paid more attention to "The Voice of Firestone" on ABC-TV this season. The oldest and in fact the only straight program of serious music left on television, it has offered some excellent entertainment this year.

Letter To The Editor

May 19, 1959

Dear Mr. Roy,

I have been following, eagerly, the articles in "The Gettysburg Times" about saving the Battlefield Area and the efforts to prevent it from becoming "commercialized."

After reading the item about the "threat to the battlefield" Mr. Scharf pointed out I decided to send you an editorial published in the April 25, 1959, edition of the Army-Navy Air Force Journal (Register) and Defense Times.

I regret that the future of Edward R. Murrow's conversational program, "Small World," is uncertain next season. Television will be a poorer medium if it does not return.

I regret that "Desilu Playhouse" not only lasted this season but seems fated to return for another. When you recall the great days of "Studio One" from New York and then think of some of the twaddle "Desilu Playhouse" has perpetrated on the public this season under the name of drama, you ask yourself what is happening to television?

I am originally from Gettysburg. My father is E. C. Shriver and Robert H. Shriver is my brother. They still live there.

This editorial is word for word. I hope it will show that we who love the history and beauty of the Battlefield are not alone in hoping to preserve it thusly.

SAVE THE SHRINES

"It is a sad and ironical fact that just as patriotic Americans, both North and South, are readying plans for a four-year Centennial of the Civil War the historic battlefields where this grim struggle was fought are in danger of being submerged by commercial greed."

"Over the past half century Congress has been very stingy when it came to appropriating money to preserve these historic sites. For the most part, what preservation has been done, and that is only a fraction of what should have been done, is to the credit of the several states and public spirited men and women who paid money out of pocket to keep these hallowed places as near like they were when great events occurred there as possible.

"Most of these efforts came too late to save the buildings, grounds and relics of the American Revolution. It would take a historian with a good map and a stack of reference books to even find where George Washington and his ragged Continentals bought this nation's independence with their dogged courage, their blood and their dead comrades."

Various veterans groups and other patriotic societies have done a little better with the places directly connected with the American Civil War. But now these places are threatened by the bursting population in the towns adjacent to the old battlefields.

"Suburbia's invasion at Gettysburg, and at Sharpsburg, Manassas, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Petersburg, Vicksburg, and even way out at Pea Ridge, Arkansas, is regrettable enough. But the worst feature is the multiplying hucksters who make money off the people who come to visit these places every day in the year. These range all from the garish frozen custard stands on up . . . or down, depending on your point of view . . . to the outright tourist traps that cluster as close to the monuments and the graves located on the hallowed ground."

"To cite but one example of this galloping commercialism, the Manassas (or Bull Run) Battlefield, practically in the front door of the nation's capital city, is already more than half taken up with private homes and business institutions. Two of the most critical battles of the Civil War, one in 1861 and the bigger one in 1862, were fought there. Today only a fragment of this dark and bloody ground is recognizable and even that is being nibbled away month by month."

"At Gettysburg there is a privately owned and operated 'museum' where a fat fee is charged to each individual who listens to a 20-minute recording of a spiel about the battle. And this spiel is a once-over-very-lightly account of that three days of slaughter."

"At the same time the National Park Service exhibit is cramped up in an upstairs room of the downtown post office building and, though it is free to all comers, only few Gettysburg visitors know it is there."

"It has been said, and we think wisely so, that a nation that has no past has no future, and the nation that does not treasure the relics of its past does not deserve a future."

"In the budget now before Congress there is a recommendation that the outlay of money for the improvement of these shrines be doubled . . . to $3,000,000. That is far short of what is needed. The boundaries of the whole National Park System could be secured, for about $30,000,000, against this commercial invasion. But with land prices soaring, and the building boom in full swing, that figure will go up, up, up, at an alarming rate. And unless something constructive is done to save these historic places for posterity they will soon be lost forever."

I hope this gives you some encouragement.

Sincerely,
Maud Shriver Peele

PITTSBURGH IS WITHOUT DAILY PAPERS

PITTSBURGH (AP)—This steel center was without local daily newspapers for the second day today due to a strike of truck drivers.

The strike by Local 211 of the Newspaper, Magazine & Film Delivery Drivers, Helpers and Handlers—an affiliate of the Teamsters Union—began Saturday afternoon, blocking delivery of Sunday editions of the Sun-Telegraph and the Press, afternoon and Sunday dailies.

Last night the Post-Gazette, a morning newspaper, rolled off a few copies of its first edition, but they were distributed only to employees within the building and none was placed on sale.

End Not In Sight

Members of the editorial and mechanical departments of the Post-Gazette reported for work as usual yesterday, and the management of both the Press and Sun-Telegraph instructed their employees to report for work today.

There was no indication when negotiations between the publishers and the striking union might resume.

The union's old contract expired April 1. Local president Theodore

Genial Judge Solves Marriage Problem

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A page from the diary of Dan Cupid—

Cozza and the publishers reached agreement two weeks ago on a new contract that provided a 10-cent-an-hour package increase. But members of the union rejected the proposal and negotiations continued. The basic wage rate of the drivers under the old pact was $2.66 1/2 an hour.

The union claimed the Sun-Telegraph "has seen fit to change negotiated working procedure in effect more than 10 years and insists it will only continue to operate as it chooses."

The union charged the Sun-Telegraph refused to operate under conditions existing at the Post-Gazette and the Press.

The union added that its offer to negotiate separately with the Post-Gazette and Press was rejected by those newspapers, which chose to bargain collectively.

Publisher Alan G. Nicholas of the Sun-Telegraph called the strike "unnecessary" and said he was willing to submit the dispute to arbitration.

A statement by the Press said "issues over use of a steward on a loading dock at the Sun Telegraph and a private pension policy at that paper have been the principal ones discussed."

I put the marriage bug in the ear of George Kalajian and Lucy Sherkinian.

So two months ago they scheduled their wedding for Sunday afternoon in this city. They made elaborate plans and sent out 200 invitations.

They'd completed all the legal steps Friday—taken blood tests, gotten their license and all that kind of stuff, you know.

Then they were told they couldn't get married with the license because it was issued in New Jersey. Lucy lives in Camden, N.J., here.

and George in Sicklerville, N.J. So I called on Judge Kendall, L. Shoyer of the Orphans Court

He solved the problem. He waived the waiting period and immediately issued a new license.

The party was attended by Soviet Minister of Culture Nikolay Mikhaylov, top Soviet stage personalities, and diplomatic representatives.

ARMY DEFENDS ITS HERCULES MISSILE SETUP

By ELTON C. FAY
AP Military Affairs Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army has spoken up sharply and publicly against a Senate committee's recommendation to chop off three-quarters of the money to expand its Nike Hercules anti-aircraft missile system.

In addition, the Army is stepping up its intramural war with the Air Force—and specifically its Bomarc missile.

While the Army went to bat for its anti-aircraft system, the Air Force reportedly made a formal proposal to the Joint Chiefs of staff that an all-service strategic command be established to control all nuclear retaliatory weapons. This would include the Navy's future missile-firing submarines.

Called "Obsolete"
Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, was reported to have told associates, however, that the Air Force has no designs on taking over direct command of the Polaris missile submarines as part of a strategic retaliatory force.

Last week the Senate Armed Services Committee recommended that $22,400,000 for more Hercules bases in continental United States and Hawaii be trimmed to about five million. The Nike Hercules weapon, said the committee, is "virtually obsolete."

For days the Army smarted in silence over the fund cut and the "obsolete" description.

Some Army Answers
Then on Friday an official Army spokesman came up with answers to questions by newsmen.

If Congress goes ahead with the Senate committee's proposed amendment to a House-approved bill, said the spokesman, "serious gaps" in the nation's aircraft defenses would occur. The spokesman added:

At stake are 50 Nike Hercules battery sites for protection of 25 Strategic Air Command bases in the United States and at eight locations in Hawaii.

Called "Too Short"
The Army's Nike Hercules can carry an atomic warhead 80 to 100 miles.

The Air Force's rival Bomarc will have an eventual range of 400 miles and also will mount a nuclear warhead.

The Air Force contends the Nike Hercules' range is too short, that enemy bombers carrying missiles would be within reach of the target before the Hercules could touch it.

Frankie Schneider Winner At Grove

HARRISBURG (AP)—Frankie Schneider of Lambertville, N.J., withstood a late bid by Mike Klapak of Warren, Ohio, Sunday to win the 100-lap feature race for late model stock cars at nearby Williams Grove Speedway. The race was sanctioned by the U.S. Auto Club for the national championship.

Schneider, who led all the way, finished 150 yards ahead of Klapak who didn't make his challenge until the 75th lap.

Ten of the 24 starters were forced out of the gruelling race. Following Schneider and Klapak across the finish line were Frankie Thompson, Shewsbury, Pa. and Haas Kagle, Baltimore.

pital at Niteroi, across the bay from Rio, said it counted 84 patients wounded either by gunfire or by the disturbances.

Violence erupted when the commander of a navy launch, provided to transport commuters from Niteroi to Rio, ordered the marines to open fire on the crowd surging wildly aboard the boat. Mobs burned the ferry dock, looted stores and destroyed a dockside warehouse.

Stamp News

By SYD KRONISH
The Associated Press

The Republic of Togo, which expects full independence by 1960, has just issued a new set of two stamps depicting local flowers.

Togo, a little country on the west coast of Africa, has had quite a transitory history. In 1884 it was a German colony and was called Togoland. At the beginning of the 20th century it became independent but in 1914 at the start of World War I it was occupied by British troops. In 1922 the little land became a League of Nations mandate and in 1946 a United Nations trusteeship. At that time part of Togoland joined with Ghana. The major portion was placed under French rule but given local self rule in 1956. Now it is waiting for full independence.

One of the new stamps is a five francs showing the flower of the bombak tree which produces kapok, one of Togo's main exports. The other, a 20 francs, illustrates the giant tectona grandis tree which produces teak wood.

Italy commemorates the centenary of Sicily's first postage stamps by issuing a new set of two values. The stamps, 25 lire blue green and 60 lire orange, are reproductions of the original Sicilian two and five grana values. They bear a portrait of Ferdinand II. A new stamp of interesting design has been issued by Turkey to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the Istanbul Lyceum for Boys. It is one of the most famous boys schools on the European continent. Depicted on the stamp is a blackboard with the dates 1884 subtracted from 1959 to show an answer of 75.

Norway has honored the 100th anniversary of the Norwegian Temperance Movement with a special stamp. The 45 ore brown adhesive carries a portrait of which it replaced.

Asbjorn Kloster who established the first temperance society upon which the "Norwegian Union of Total Abstinens" was later founded.

Flannel Flower

Australia plans to issue a floral set during 1959. The first in the series was a new 2 shilling blue stamp showing the Flannel Flower. It was issued at all Australian post offices April 8 and is of the same size as the 2 shilling Aboriginal Art stamp of which it replaced.

MORE TRAINING ADVISED FOR PA. JUNE GRADS

HARRISBURG (AP)—Here's a word of advice to June graduates from the State Bureau of Employment Security:

"Now may be the time to increase education and training rather than to plunge into the workaday world when competition for beginning jobs is keen."

The bureau warned over the weekend that in addition to the scramble for jobs among themselves, seniors graduating from Pennsylvania high schools and colleges in June face competition from laid-off workers who have years of experience.

Not Discouraging

However, the bureau said the job situation for graduates is far from discouraging. They have youth in their favor.

"Regardless of economic conditions," a bureau spokesman said, "employers are usually interested in young trainable workers to fit into their organizations for expansion and replacement purposes."

A statewide survey made by the bureau shows Pittsburgh, with expanding production facilities, new shopping centers and research laboratories, offers the most job opportunities for newcomers.

The survey had this to say about other cities:

Philadelphia: "Employment is expected to rise somewhat during the next several months. Hiring is expected to be best in construction, finance, insurance, apparel, pharmaceuticals, electrical machinery, retail trade and services."

Erie: "Job prospects for younger workers do not seem too encouraging. However, construction and service occupations indicate considerable promise for the coming months."

Scranton: "The past year has been characterized by high unemployment. The long range outlook, however, is more encouraging."

Favorable Outlook

Wilkes-Barre-Pittston and Nanticoke: "An increase in employment can be traced to the apparel industry. By mid-July some 1,300 workers will be needed in apparel and construction."

Reading: "Area employers are showing more optimism about the employment outlook over the next several months than at the same time last year. However, new entrants will face keen competition."

Harrisburg: "The employment outlook for the near future is favorable. Construction, agriculture, apparel, retail trade and service are the industries in which the most favorable developments are expected. However, competition for those jobs requiring few qualifications will be heavy."

The old-fashioned parent is one who believes stern discipline means exactly what it says.

RIDES HERD ON MUSICIANS IN OKLAHOMA

By SHELBY SCATES

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A slightly built Englishman who slings a baton instead of a six-gun is changing the cultural tastes across skyscraper and oil-derrick studded Oklahoma.

Guy Fraser Harrison, whose crisp English accent is giving way to a Western drawl, rides herd on the Oklahoma City Symphony orchestra. He'll match his woodwinds and brass against any other collection in the country.

"Revolution in tastes?" says Harrison. "I've just gone along and done as I felt I should do with music here. I've never bowed too far to the whims of the public."

Oklahomans apparently like what Harrison has done in the eight years he has been here. The Oklahoma City Symphony has one of the highest per capita subscription rates in the nation.

Great Impact

"You can't deny the impact the orchestra has had in the past eight years," says an Oklahoma City music critic. "Eighty concerts a season is bound to make an unmistakable impression on the people."

Harrison doesn't cater only to big city culture. At least 10 of those concerts are in smaller Oklahoma towns, in high school gyms short on acoustics but abounding in audience appreciation.

Once a year Harrison gets choral groups from eight Oklahoma colleges as active participants in a massive musical work.

This year it was Handel's monumental "Te Deum," and it was better than a barn raising for the 500 students involved.

"It's the same each year. A tremendous experience for myself and the students," Harrison explains.

There are other factors at work in the revolution.

At least half the symphony's musicians work on the side as music teachers in Oklahoma colleges. Harrison himself pitches in at high schools and colleges at times.

Problems Aplenty

But the swing from tom-toms and frontier hoedowns to symphonic complexities isn't without its problems. And Harrison is the first to admit it.

Most of his musicians must be recruited from the East and competition for them is stiff.

"As a result those available are usually very young or older, and the older ones are rather set in their ways and likely to tell you, 'This is the way I played

Dad Drops Dead By Injured Son

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—A father slumped dead in the street Sunday as he knelt to put a pillow beneath the head of his unconscious son. A doctor said the father, James E. Hinderliter, 40, apparently died of a heart attack.

Hinderliter had called the doctor after emerging from his house to see his son, James L., 15, lying in the street beside his motorcycle. The youth lost control of the cycle trying to avoid striking a dog.

The teen-ager was hospitalized with internal injuries.

Marie McDonald And Executive Wed

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)— Actress Marie (the Body) McDonald and TV executive Lou Bass surprised their friends by getting married in this desert resort over the weekend.

They had been dating about eight months, but both said the decision to get married Saturday was made on the spur of the moment.

It was the third marriage for the shapely 35-year-old actress and the first for Bass, 36.

Scribe Comes To Defense Of Gossip; Really "News Analysis," He Declares

By SAUL PETT

NEW YORK (AP)—I don't know how gossip got its bad name, but I'm coming out in favor of it, foursquare.

Most people, if they were frank, they'd drop hypocritical pretense, would agree with me, I'll bet. After all, gossip is simply the receipt of, the mulling over and the transmission of information. Where would we be without it? Does the nature of the information taint the listener? Does the invention of the atom bomb make the scientist a murderer? Anyway, isn't it a question of semantics?

Just News Analysis
If four old biddies sitting on the front porch sip lemonade and chew up the neighborhood, why call that gossip? Why not call it news analysis? Aren't they like Walter Lippmann or Ed Murrow trying to understand the world around them, trying to satisfy a basic curiosity?

Isn't gossip in its broadest sense the basic drive behind every good reporter, research scientist or counter spy? Personally, I find that nothing brightens or uplifts or adds a dash of color to a dull day than a choice bit of gossip.

If Charlie Jones, who lives three doors down the street, belts his wife, I want to know about it. I find such information stimulating. If, it develops, the boss' secretary is shopping for a trousseau and baby clothes at the same time, I do not feel degraded hearing about it or even asking for more information.

Brightens The Drib
Gossip, after all, provides the excitement in the drab lives of the rest of us who can't afford to or lack the temerity to do the things people get gossiped about. If you know a man who shouts down his mother-in-law after two beers, don't protect me from the news. It may be inspirational.

Have you ever seen greater esprit de corps or a greater sense of vitality in the office that exists in the group of gossips buzzing around the water cooler?

WOMAN, 11 MEN ARE ARRESTED IN ARMS PLOT

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A pretty woman flier and 11 men were accused by the government Saturday of plotting to export war materials illegally after agents pounced on an arms-laden plane.

The four-engine C74 was reported bound for the Dominican Republic to arm foes of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro. Fulgencio Batista, ousted by Castro last New Year's eve, is in exile at the Dominican capital, Ciudad Trujillo.

Thirteen persons in all, including the Dominican Republic's consul at Miami, were arrested Friday and placed in bond.

Charged also with conspiring to bribe a federal officer were Consul Augusta Ferrando; Joseph Liquori, 29-year-old Miami policeman; and Leonard Trenton, 35, a Jr., 34, the pilots, and 1 others building materials dealer from Newark, N.J.

The plane, 200,000 cartridges, and a quantity of rifles and automatic weapons were seized by customs officers as the plane was warming up at Miami International Airport.

The officers arrested Virginia L. Bland, 36, and Samuel E. Poole, Jr., 34, the pilots, and 1 others at the scene. Ferrando was persuaded six hours later by telephone to quit his refuge in the consulate and surrender.

John Embury of Tampa said he had no idea what the plane's cargo was when he was hired as flight engineer. William Brookley, 30, a University of Miami engineering student, said he was an innocent bystander. "I should have stayed at school today," he said.

Paulino said: "I know nothing about this case. It came as a big surprise."

LEARN TO LIKE NEW FOODS AT TASTE PARTY

By PHIL GUNBY
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — If Johnny won't eat his broccoli, perhaps a tasting party is in order. Researchers at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station have arranged tasting parties for 28 fourth graders as part of a study of food waste in school lunches. After the youngsters checked off the vegetables they liked, did not like, or had never tasted, the researchers inquired into family practices in buying, preparing and serving the vegetables. Parents also were asked if THEY liked the vegetables. Then, says the study report, the three vegetables with which the children were least familiar — broccoli, rutabaga and squash — were served to them in a variety of ways. Get Acquainted The report said: "As each new vegetable was presented at tasting parties, it was shown in its natural form and the children were told what part of the plant it represented. "The students were given opportunities to read about the vegetables in the classroom and some brought samples of broccoli and squash from home. These were cooked and the class tasted them. "The children were also provided opportunities to suggest more appealing ways of preparing and serving the vegetables." The original study was conducted in the fall of 1954 and the preference phase repeated among 26 of the original 28 children in the spring of 1956. Familiarity Helps Generally, the report says, children ate best the vegetables with which they were most familiar and which were served regularly at home. When relatively new vegetables were served at tasting parties and later served at school lunch program, acceptance "tended to improve with familiarity." When the re-survey was conducted, the report went on, "the degree of acceptance built up in the vegetable acceptance improvement program for certain previously unfamiliar vegetables was fairly well maintained." Food acceptance programs like tasting parties can serve a double purpose, the researchers conclude. "First, in increasing the variety of foods familiar to the children, and second, in increasing the nutritional benefits derived by children from the school lunch by stimulating their interest in food and cultivating better attitudes toward it." But, they warn: "Children in the present study tended to slip back into a pattern of higher plate waste when the educational efforts were relaxed." First words spoken over the telephone were, "Watson, come here; I want you," spoken by Alexander Graham Bell to his assistant.

Gold Reserves Dwindling But U.S. Still Has Biggest Stock, Over $20 Billion

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—Uncle Sam once had nearly 25 billion dollars in gold socked away. Now he has just a bit more than 20 billion. That's still a tidy sum, the world's largest hoard. The U.S. Treasury says it isn't losing any sleep over the loss since 1949—even though the flow of gold into foreign hands has been most impressive in the last 15 months, and has got up steam again in the last few weeks. The gold went into foreign hands, not yours, because Americans are forbidden by law to buy or hold gold except as jewelry, teeth fillings, or the like. Want Price Higher But the central banks of other nations can buy gold from Fort Knox, if they put up U.S. dollars for it at $35 an ounce. Some foreigners think Uncle Sam should double the price, or even raise it higher still. Most of those talking this way are major extractors of gold from mines. And who couldn't like to see the price of his products increase? If Congress and the administration get upset by the outflow of gold they can stop letting foreign nations buy it from the U.S. Treasury. If they want to — and few think they do — they could raise the price of gold. Like Stock Pile Should this country double, say, the price it pays for gold, what would it mean to you? 1. It would mean that as a shareholder in the American economy your currency would be backed nominally by 40 billion dollars worth of gold instead of 20 billion — although the physical amount of gold in Fort Knox would be the same. In a sense, that would be like a two-for-one stock split — more shares in your strong box, the same assets held in common. 2. It would mean — at least theoretically—that in time the price of everything you own and everything you buy would be doubled. (Theoretically, because when the price of gold was hiked in 1934 from $30.67 to $35 an ounce with the idea that would boost prices and thus cure the big depression, it didn't work out as expected.) Buying Spurt 3. It would mean that if you had some gold mining stock you'd feel lucky. (And on the odd chance of it some people have been buying gold mining stocks.) 4. It would mean that almost certainly other currencies would be adjusted accordingly. So your dealings with customers and suppliers would be in larger figures, if not in larger volume. Advocates of a gold price hike hold that all that really would happen would be a rational readjustment of the price of one of the few commodities whose price has not changed since 1934. They think the big growth in volume of the world's currency requires a big base (in stated value) of gold.
